"When the heat of summer's over"

The leaves are falling, falling
 Around me thick and fast,
 Their rainbow hues recalling
 The glory of the past.
 I see them flutter, flutter
 Like snowflakes to the ground.

OLD STORY

Robert Francis, in New York Sun.
 It's an old story—this about the leaves.
 We've heard it ever since we can remember.
 We know it all by heart. It's an old story.
 These children raking leaves, jumping in leaves,
 Raking them up again, and leaves still falling—
 Leaf-smoke and wood-smoke and the gleam of bonfires,
 Twilight early and dark by suppertime
 And mother calling Supper, supper's ready—
 It's an old story. We know it word for word!
 Yet still the old surprises half surprise us.
 The book falls open to the familiar place.
 The words are smooth. It's an old story.
 Her voice
 Reads on and on until we fall asleep.

Not a vestige of a cloud remained to mar the perfection of a bright blue sky at sunrise today. The torrential storm, which had yielded 3.35 inches of rain in Boston in about 30 hours, had abated before midnight after raising the October precipitation to 4.77 inches, 51.4 per cent above the normal 3.15 inches for the month. So, in a few wet hours, the prolonged drought was ended and a big bite was taken in the year's rain shortage which began about July 1. The month averaged about half a degree above the norm in temperature. Boston's mark at 7.30 this morning was at the 24-hour low of 43 degrees. Highest yesterday was 47. There were strong westerly winds and humidity percentage was low.

Boston awoke to another fine cloudless morning after the meteorological experts had recorded Nov. 1 as a perfect day, with normal temperature, clear sky and gentle breezes. Barometric pressure had shown a decided rise. Last night was as clear as the day had been, with stars and planets unusually bright and the waning moon, rising very late, hanging, pale in the west, long after sunrise. Official temperature was 40 degrees at 7.30 A.M. The night's lowest was 39 and Wednesday's highest 53. For Mt. Washington the story is different. Clouds overhung the summit, where 15 inches of snow had fallen and visibility was recorded as zero. Temperature dropped to 19 degrees Fahrenheit during the night. It is winter up there.

RADIO CLUB HOLDS FIRST SESSION OF SCHOOL YEAR

Lindemann and Benton Preside Over
Open Meeting of Around
25 Boys

The Radio Club recently held its first meeting of the year with about 25 old and new members present. Carl Lindemann, whose station is W2MLM, and David Benton (W1LKG), presided over the meeting. No new members were elected.

Radio Club activities this year will be divided into two groups, one of which will be for boys who wish to acquire amateur licences, and the other for boys who wish to construct their own sets. For boys who are building sets, there will be room in the Science Building. Boys wishing to become amateurs were advised to get radio handbooks and to attend code practice. All beginners will take lessons in the theory and the construction of radios. Future meetings will be held on Monday nights, code practices will be on Wednesday at 5 o'clock and on another day, as yet undecided.

Since the beginning of school and until a week ago, Lindemann and Benton have carried on radio activity and have talked to persons in eight states from the radio station in Amen Tower.

Dear Mother:

Well, that certainly was a mix-up over your luggage. Am glad there was not too much delay in their arrival after you reached your destination.

All goes well here. We had very heavy rains Monday and Tuesday. Yesterday and today have been sunny, brisk and ideal fall days. The downpour prevented the neighborhood kids from raising much deviltry on Hallowe'en night.

Late this afternoon there is a trustees' meeting at the public library. Tomorrow Frances and I are going to Exeter to see the Game with the Bowdoin Junior Varsity. I shall take a train just as late as possible and meet the car somewhere up the line. Saturday evening is the first meeting of the Beacon Society for the season.

Scanning the Weather

For the third time following the tempestuous ending of October the sun rose in the clear this morning. Away from tempering influence of the ocean mercury went below the freezing mark. Hoar frost lay thick on the dead grasses. Barometric pressure was very high at 7.30 A.M. at which time Boston's official temperature, lowest this month, was recorded as 35.7 degrees, while yesterday's highest was 57.4. Storm clouds again draped the summit of Mt. Washington, where wintry conditions prevailed, with a minimum temperature of 9 degrees and west-northwest gales of 60 to 70 miles an hour. Presence of wild ducks in considerable number in Boston estuaries, indicates that ponds to the north are frozen over.

1. 45. Exeter played the Bowdoin Junior Varsity. David got into the game in the fourth period and played mighty well - His team scored two touchdowns while he was in - Exeter won 41 to 6. We walked over to the car with David - took some pictures - and gave him a lift to the Thompson Gymnasium. Then to the Exeter Inn to write a note to Dean Kerr - then to Knight House and left some things for David - then on our way home - arrived at 6. 10. John not home, an insurance lecture tonight. Mary down to the Augusto's to dinner. Jane had everything ready for our return - a log fire going - the Scotch & Soda laid out. Dinner - Tomato Bisque. Trilcher Mackerel - Parsley Potatoes - Brussels Sprouts - Bread & Butter. Chocolate Cream Pie - and so to bed.

ELEVEN OVERWHELMS BOWDOIN J. V., 41-6, WITH VARIED ATTACK

27 Points in Last Period Drive;
Pass Interceptions Lead
To 2 Touchdowns

KIRMIL AND KANE SCORE

After playing sound, sane football for three periods last Friday, the Academy team really turned on the pressure in the final stanza, rolling up 27 points in 12 minutes, to rout a game but outclassed Bowdoin Junior Varsity, 41 to 6.

The P. E. A. team's pass defense, its weak point during the season, was as vulnerable as usual during most of the first three quarters, but in the last chapter, two touchdowns were accounted for by pass interceptions, while Bowdoin could not complete an aerial.

Exeter's second team, which started, marched from its own 44 to the visitors' 18, but a reverse was smeared for a 15-yard loss, and the home team could not score, as Bowdoin held for downs.

After Bowdoin had punted out to its 45, Bill Donovan, on the first play, heaved the ball to Harry Kistler, who was standing alone on the 10, whence he scored unmolested. Donovan's try for point was blocked, but he picked up the ball and lateralled to Remick, who crossed the line.

Bowdoin's first threat came early in the first period, when the visitors worked down to the P. E. A. eight-yard line, only to lose the ball on downs. After Exeter had punted, the Junior Varsity again was in scoring territory, but Wayne Harding fell on a loose ball to end the threat.

Joe Kane, after one line play had failed, took the ball on a reverse and galloped 55 yards to the visitors' 25-yard stripe, where he was run out of bounds by the safety man.

Bob Hayes, on four line plays, ripped off two straight first downs to move the ball from the 25 to the four-yard line. Kane then scored easily on a reverse. Bill

Donovan added the extra point, increasing the Exeter lead to 14-0.

The half ended a few plays later as Johnny Kirmil intercepted a Bowdoin pass and ran it back on a twisting run from midfield to the 30.

After Haslam ran the second half kickoff to the 43, Exeter moved down to Bowdoin's 30, but lost the ball on a fumble. Exeter's line held the visitors, and they punted to the Exeter 38. Bob Hayes, after fumbling the punt, kicked the ball out of bounds, and Bowdoin was awarded possession of the ball. A series of three passes was then good for two first downs, and then a score. The kick was no good.

After receiving the kick, Exeter was held after two first downs had been made on the Bowdoin 45. Donovan punted to the five, and Bruce Hallett smacked down the runner with a beautiful tackle on the 11. Bowdoin immediately punted out of danger to its own 45-yard marker.

Joe Kane proceeded to make a first down on the 34, and a Kirmil-to-Kane pass was good for 23 yards to the 11 as the period ended.

Kane scored on a reverse in the first play of the last quarter. Jack Reynolds' attempted conversion failed. After receiving the kickoff the Junior Varsity took to the air. This strategy backfired, however, as Kirmil intercepted one of the tosses on the 46, and ran it back to the 30.

On the next play he ran through a beautiful hole off-tackle, and out-sprinted the secondaries to score Exeter's fourth touchdown. Donovan's kick was good, making the score 27 to 6.

When Exeter's advance was stalled on the collegians' 40, Jack Reynolds punted, and the ball was downed on the one-foot line.

Kirmil ran the Bowdoin punt to the 25, and two plays later he snatched a Donovan pass from the arms of a White-jerseyed halfback, and raced to another score. Donovan's try for point was good.

A moment later, Captain Ralph Ward intercepted a pass on the 39 and scored again on a brilliant run. Twice he seemed to be stopped dead, but both times he kept driving, and got into the clear to tally standing up. Again Donovan's conversion was good, making the final score 41 to 6.

Substitutions: Keady, Ferguson, Harding, Bridge, Black, Leopold, White, Kane, Cowen, Kirmil, Reynolds, Ward, Elwell, Benton, Herman and Gregg.

This is probably the first photographic view of the complete facade of the historic Old South Meeting House, on Washington street. During the last 75 years, when photography developed, a building has occupied the site opposite the stately colonial building, making it impossible to place a camera far enough away from the church to photograph it. The building facing the meeting house has now been razed, making the picture possible.

Graham came at 6.15 and gave me a lift into the Algonquin Club - The first dinner of the Beacon Society for the season, the courses delicious as usual. Home at 11. David came down from Exeter for the week-end. Frances took him to the Gateway Inn a steak for lunch and then into Folsom State.

The setting sun of Friday left a pink haze along the southwestern portion of the sky rim. Night came with the stars shining their prettiest, the planets Saturn, Jupiter and Mars in line high in the south and Venus farther west, setting less than an hour later than the sun. The half moon climbed into view over the eastern hills half an hour before midnight and was in view, ghostly white, high in the sky, at nine o'clock this morning. Boston observers, at 7.30 A.M., logged the temperature at 33 degrees. Highest yesterday was 47 and lowest, after dawn, was 31.2. The sky, soon after observation time, became covered with broken stratus clouds, drab behind the sun, but glistening in silver under its direct rays.

Sunday's Storm Was Subtropical Cyclone in Boston

Sunday's storm was a "strong subtropical cyclone," not just wind and rain, Harvard's astronomers announced last night. The real significance of this cyclone, however, was that it was the first time in meteorological history that a check has been obtained on the theory that air in such a cyclonic vortex is descending, dry and warm.

Charles F. Brooks, Harvard professor of meteorology and director of the Blue Hill Observatory, announced last night that his staff had accomplished the release of a radio-sonde in the middle of the cyclone's vortex. This is believed to be the first time in history, Prof. Brooks said, that a balloon carrying weather instruments has been released into the center of this type of cyclone.

Prof. Brooks reported that high temperature and dry air were found in the center of the vortex, indicating a strong descent of air and favoring a rapid clearing of the sky after the storm passed. The temperature decreased only from 50 to 36 degrees although the balloon went as high as 13,000 feet. At the same time the humidity rapidly decreased from saturation point values to 10 percent or less.

"The storm that passed over us," Prof. Brooks said, "was essentially a circular vortex with winds of 40 miles per hour or more on all sides. At Blue Hill the maximum wind was 60 miles an hour from the northeast and later 45 miles per hour from west-southwest.

"The rapid rotation of such a circle of air tends to throw some air outward. This lowers the pressure inside the vortex and causes a descent of air from above."

Because the air comes from such a great height, Dr. Brooks explained, the amount of vapor is very small and the increasing pressure raises the temperature of the air. Above the top of the storm the temperature was actually 58 degrees below zero.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Benny return to WEA's network tonight at 7 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Benton of Boston, Mass., were in town calling on friends recently.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Benton were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Hayes on Monday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Benton were on a business trip through New Hampshire.

Scanning the Weather

A wild tropical cyclone, in which northeast winds approached hurricane force, swept, roaring and howling, over Boston and most of New England, beginning late yesterday afternoon and ending before midnight. In this vicinity precipitation, slightly more than an inch, came in the form of cold rain. To the west, southwest and north there was some snow with the rain. Barometric pressure dropped to 29.21 inches at the height of the storm. Greatest wind velocity recorded officially here was 64 miles an hour, which is the extreme limit, technically, of full gale force. Hurricane velocity begins at 75. Great damage was done to shipping, and along the coast by heavy seas. Many trees were blown down and highway traffic was extremely dangerous. The cyclone came on the anniversary of a great snowstorm on Nov. 5, 1894, the election day on which Republicans swept the congressional elections, overturning a Democratic majority. On that date wires were down and news of the election was greatly delayed. Boston temperature at 7.30 today was 40 degrees. Highest yesterday was 53. Lowest in 24 hours 39.

With the storm over, this day rapidly became ideal. Breakfast of orange juice - Broiled egg on hash - Toast - Iced Coffee - Iced Coffee. Mary took me to the Square, stopping first at Curtis' Drugstore to get a check cashed. Subway. Office. Usual work. Paid the monthly installment on the Mercury today. Did not go out to lunch until 2. Drafted & sent out the "Orders for the Day" for next Saturday. Also drafted reader for Mary's engagement notice. Charlie Muldoon called up to see if I was still practicing law. Wanted me to act as counsel in Boston Terminable Organization. Unfortunately had to decline. Left for home at 4.45 - Mary met me. Home. Mary had another cooking lesson today. Dinner. Home made Chicken Soup. Hot Ox Tongue - Mustard. Horse Radish Sauce - Parsley Potatoes. Spinach. Turnip. Butterscotch Pudding with Whipped Cream. John went out to Weston to visit a P. Eta friend, Alex Kellogg. Mary went down to Mrs. Littlefield's on Brattle St. to play Bridge.

Scanning the Weather

Boston's lowest temperature last night was seven degrees higher than the low mark at Jacksonville, Fla., which was 33. Between the two cities are large areas covered by snow. The latter fact accounts for the chill which accompanies winds from south of west. The sun rose today behind a bank of sullen clouds which soon took on pink trimmings. Temperature reached the high mark of 52 degrees yesterday and averaged normal for the date. Lowest, early today was 40 and the score at 7.30 A. M. was but half a degree higher. Barometric pressure was fairly low here and was much lower on Mt. Washington where clouds have enshrouded the summit as on most of the recent mornings.

TOAST OF THE HOUR among Lowell House men at Harvard, pretty Ronnie Smith of Revere, who "panicked" male spectators at Soldiers field yesterday when she appeared as drum major for the Lowell House band. In the background is the band, whose members appear to be victims of over-study.

Lowell House Flaunts Past; Band Adopts Drum Majorette

11/7/39

All other Harvard men can be slaves to tradition if they have a mind to, but the men of Lowell House and the Lowell House band vowed yesterday they would march behind pretty Ronnie Smith, no matter where she led them.

Harvard spoke out last week on the subject of female drum majors and the speech was "nothing doing." But there was plenty doing yesterday afternoon when Ronnie led the Lowell House band across Soldiers field gridiron.

While it was cold when the Lowell House football team took the field against Adams House, the mercury somehow rallied sharply after Ronnie's unexpected appearance at the half.

Ronnie had shed her fur coat to do her best for dear old Lowell House, and the unveiling revealed her dainty self in light blue gabar-

Drum Majorette Leads Harvard "Band" to Stadium Grid Contest

HARVARD GETS A DRUM MAJORETTE—AT LAST

Maybe official Harvard and the university band don't want a trim-legged lass performing with a baton at the football games but the boys at the Lowell House do. They produced this young lady, Miss Rennie Smith of Revere, for yesterday's game between teams of the Lowell House and Adams House. She is shown leading the Lowell House "band" to Soldiers Field.

dine shorts and blue sweater. A few of the boys looked about for a Yale man, but hurried right back for another look at Ronnie.

Word that a girl drum major was performing in Yale colors in the shadow of Harvard stadium brought hundreds of students on the run from nearby business school dormitories. They arrived breathless and coatless, and a few of them were barefoot.

News camera men photographing the Harvard varsity squad followed the crowd and dashed on the field with their eyes buried in camera hoods. One photographer buried his vision in the process and ran smack into a goalpost. He was left struggling on the turf.

The excitement diminished after Ronnie blew her whistle, twirled her baton and gave the band a much needed rest. The spectators also welcomed the opportunity for relaxation, but crowded around the band while the petite drum major climbed up on the bass drum and posed for pictures.

A group of students replaced Ronnie's fur coat over her shoulders with as much pride as the mascot who wraps a blanket around a varsity captain. Another group of students escorted the girl to an automobile outside the gate and took her home to Revere.

She explained it was not her idea to serve as drum major for Lowell House or any other house, but added she would be glad to swap places with any lineman on the football team. She has been drum majoring for most of her 20 years.

The football players returned to play the second half, but their hearts were in Revere. A few of the faithful waited for the final score, but this was lost in the shuffle.

WINTER PAID A BRIEF VISIT to Boston today. The camera man found pedestrians bucking a driving snowstorm on Tremont street about 8 o'clock this morning, as shown above. The squall lasted about 15 minutes, and the sun was shining again within a short time.

Eleven Minutes After Hitler Left for Berlin the Bomb Exploded

Here is the beer hall after the bomb went off. Sixteen years ago Hitler, a Munich carpenter, fired a shot in this shrine of Nazidom (the mark of which was still pointed out to visitors). The shot was to emphasize Hitler's shout that the "revolution" was on. Hitler and most Nazi leaders (Goebbels, Hess, Frick and Streicher) had left (earlier than usual) before the explosion. Eight persons were killed and more than sixty wounded. Note the light and balcony.

A German official investigation said that the bomb was placed in the beer hall by an artisan who made four trips to the shrine to install and adjust the bomb in a column supporting the ceiling. The Gestapo arrested a Georg Elser, German, said he confessed and also announced the capture of two British Secret Service agents at the Dutch border.

Scanning the Weather

Old Man Winter paid a surreptitious visit to New England last night and early today. He sneaked in from the west, hidden by black clouds from which he scattered snow and white pellets of hail which were driven hither and yon by wild winds. With temperature in most places a few degrees above freezing the snow and hail melted into slippery ooze on highway surfaces, causing automobiles to skid and slither. The visitation was brief. When the sun came out this morning the sky looked a brighter blue than is usual, in contrast with receding inky clouds. Boston temperature had reached a new high mark for this month on Wednesday, at 58.2 degrees. The snow squalls caused it to decline to the minimum 12-hour figure of 38 at 7.30 this morning. Colder weather was indicated at that time. Mt. Washington summit was encased in clouds again and hurricane winds were soaring round the frosted crags.

Undefeated Host of Phillips Andover Eleven This Saturday

Nine Backs Rated Just About Even For Red and Gray

By Harry Alcorn

Staff Correspondent of the Transcript

EXETER, N. H., Nov. 9—Individually this present Phillips Exeter eleven may not be so talented as some of its immediate predecessors. Yet it will enter its annual classic with rival Andover here at the Plympton Playing Field this Saturday undefeated, untied and favored to gain its first victory over its traditional foe in four years. The record plus the boys' grim determination to avenge the hard luck they've had for two years must make them the choice.

Picking the line apart, position by position, Coach Bill Clark, who—like Steve Sorota of the Royal Blue—is serving his first term at the helm, can't see that it equals some of those in the past. Yet no rival has scored on the Red and Gray by a ground attack as yet, probably because of its better conditioning and greater depth. Two or three boys rate well enough at every berth to indicate they will see some service on Saturday.

But it's not till the backfield is examined that the real reason for the Exeter success this fall is evident. Where in recent years there have been only three or four talented boys, the present squad has nine standouts, all of whom plays about the same amount of time. Almost every game so far has found a new quartet lined up for the opening whistle.

Taking the situation as a whole, that depth and conditioning seem to be the items that should turn the tide against Andover if Exeter does get back into the victory column. The Royal Blue may well hold its own for three quarters but it should find the going tougher in the final session. Of the 135 points the New Hampshire eleven has scored in six games, 73 have come in that last quarter when it just won't be stopped.

Two Pivots Even

Six boys are in line for duty at the end posts. A pair of speedy, all-around boys, Wayne Harding and Bill White, are set to start but Roger Wilson. Harry Kistler, Jim Tormey and Hal Gregg should be in there before the final whistle. Wilson is a stickout who might be a regular if he hadn't been hampered by injuries.

Melrose's Dick Keady, son of Coach Tom of Lowell High, and Bill Watson, a converted blocking back who tops the squad on aggressiveness, are due to start at the tackles. John Quigley, the former Chelsea High guard, and Bill Ferguson, the 192-pound wrestling captain from Denver, will spell them.

Tom Bridge and Hiram Black, a pair of 1938 reserves who saw very little action then, have developed into a good steady pair of starting ends. Another converted back, Bruce Hallett, who has done a great job blocking, and Lloyd Duxbury, the fastest of the guard squad, come next in order, followed by Dave Benton of Belmont, one of very few Greater Boston boys in the picture.

There's little to pick between the two ranking centers, Warren Leopold or Roger Tyler, but the former has the nod on his experience. Both are good backers-up and great downfield blockers.

Veterans Jack Reynolds, Joe Kane, Captain Ralph Ward and newcomer "Chuck" Haslam are the likely starters though Coach Bill and his aides, Gordon Benn and Ralph Lovshin, may change their minds before game time. If they are together, Reynolds will do the blocking and signaling, Ward and Kane will be at the halves and Haslam will do the plunging from the fullback post.

John Kirmil may possibly start in place of Ward and at any rate will get in there at that post along with Bobby Hayes of Whitman. Will Donovan of Norwood will follow Kane at the right halfback berth and both Bruce Remick of Marblehead and veteran Tom Cowen of Newton will displace Haslam at some time or other.

about the
Field and the Home Office

An outstanding wedding in Providence on Columbus Day was that of T. S. Devellis, Assistant in the Providence District, and Miss Sue Cerbo, daughter of Agent V. Cerbo of the same district. After the ceremonies at St. Bartholomew's Church, a dinner was served to 350 guests and in the evening the bride and groom left for a honeymoon of two weeks in which they toured the Catskills and attended the New York Fair.

Supt. Cahill of the Fall River District and Mrs. Cahill celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary on September 14th. A dinner was served at Luke's Lodge, Tiverton, R. I., which was attended by many relatives and friends.

Thomas F. Jennings, Assistant Superintendent in the Malden Office for a number of years, passed away suddenly on Sept. 19. Deep sympathy is extended to his family.

Ira Jivelekian, former Boston College football and track star, is now an agent in the Malden Office.

Olindo Ventola celebrated his tenth year as an agent in the Chelsea Office by being appointed Assistant Superintendent in the Malden District.

On Thursday, September 7, the members of the Salem District went on a deep-sea fishing trip as the finale of a four weeks' contest between two teams captained by district leaders Eino Wilson and Bob Herrick. Captain Wilson's team won, thereby bestowing upon Captain Herrick and his team the dubious honor of being hosts for the occasion. It proved to be a very enjoyable day for all present. The "catch" consisted of two cases of sea-sickness, three colds, and four fish. The Gloucester "Fishermen" caught the colds and sea-sickness, while the Salem "land-lubbers" caught the fish.

Membership in the Quota Club of Salem continues to grow and it will soon have all the agents of the District in its ranks. The present members are Eino Wilson, Napoleon Dionne, Irving Phelps, William Barbrick, and Benjamin Dore. The club slogan, "Good men will do more; anyone satisfied with less will not be successful", continues to challenge every man in the district to produce at least $13.00 combined each quarter and no one in Salem will ever be "satisfied with less".

Mr. Henry L. Horan, Superintendent of the Pawtucket Office, was married to Miss Ruth McCurdy at St. Leo's Church in Darlington, R. I., on Saturday morning, July 29. A reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, 50 Basswood Ave., Providence, after which the bride and groom left for a trip to the World's Fair.

Agent Arthur Geller of Pittsfield has learned that you can't stop moving in this business without paying for it. Arthur stopped his car for a moment to look up an address in his book, and was immediately run into by a truck which did about $200 damage to his car.

Agent Ray Dunn at Pawtucket had the honor of passing out cigars to the agency force, the reason being a brand new, nine-pound boy. Mother and son are doing well.

IN THE NEWS

On October 6, Agent Henry Albee of Pittsfield celebrated his 64th birthday. A surprise birthday party, cake and all, was given him at the regular weekly meeting. A Berkshire newspaper dated October 6, 1875 was displayed in which was the announcement of his birth. Mr. Albee is as active as the youngest man in the District and covers a debit which takes in a great part of Southern Berkshire.

A Salem doughnut shop, where the boys like to dunk their sinkers every morning after leaving the office, displays in a frame over the counter a poem that expresses an idea which can well be adopted by all insurance men, especially those who let their disappointments and troubles (sometimes real; more often, trifling or imaginary) blind them to all the good they are getting, and can get, from their jobs. The poem:

In your journey through this life, brother,
Whatever be your goal,
Keep your eye upon the doughnut
And never mind the hole.

Agent Armond Guinipero of Pittsfield is the proud father of a baby girl born October 23.

Wedding bells rang on July 9 for Agent Guido Trocchio of the Roslindale District. The bride was formerly Miss Viola Tarallo of Hyde Park. We wish them all the luck in the world for their future happiness.

At Roslindale on September 1, Agent Charles Sullivan was presented with a lovely daughter, Helen, and on September 7, Agent Andrew DeFrancesco became the father of a baby boy named Andrew, Jr.

The Lewiston District is pleased to announce that Agent Edward Sawyer has been promoted to the ranks of Assistant Superintendent. His new duties began October 16th.

The old Plymouth, operated by Agent Kenney of Lewiston and known as Old Faithful, has retired from active duty. The people on Mr. Kenney's debit are anxiously peering out their windows to watch his arrival in a shiny Oldsmobile.

Boston District rejoices that Van Kidian has returned to work after a long illness.

Agent Joe Mulvey of Boston was quite busy over Labor Day, the reason being that his two sisters got married. We wonder how much longer Joe has to go before Dan Cupid gets him.

Some dazzling news from Boston: We understand Agent Sullivan feels "that way" and the date, we think, will be in January. It also looks like "happy days" for Agent Yacobian, who, we have been told, is in the market for a sparkler.

Assistant W. Seminara of Boston has taken a leave of absence due to illness. We hope that he will be back soon, feeling like his old self again.

Agent Bumbaca of Boston is gamely collecting his debit in spite of misfortune. One of his policyholders left the dog's dinner out and Mr. Bumbaca slipped on it, resulting in a broken arm.

Assistant Giacosanio of Boston came back from the Fair with such glowing reports that the cashiers and Assistant Nickinson decided to go and see it for themselves.

Assistant Reardon of the Holyoke District announces the birth of a son. This makes his third boy, no girls. Good luck, Mr. Reardon! Six more will make a ball team.

Miss Nellie Sheehan, veteran cashier at the Holyoke Office, is back at work after being out seven weeks with a broken ankle.

Judge Patrick J. Lane of the Claim Department has resumed his usual duties and, we are very glad to say, is much improved in health.

Eastern Steamship Lines, Railroad Lines, and the U. S. Mails between Boston and New York are being well patronized by Miss Asta Backe. Even with all these modern streamlined conveniences, we're sure that Asta often breathes, "If I only had wings!"

We've heard that the editors of "House Beautiful" are interested in Ann Igoe's new and delightful apartment. From the colorful descriptions, it fairly breathes Colonial charm.

Catherine Ryan is back with us after a prolonged and strenuous illness. We're glad to see her and most certainly hope that she will keep well and strong.

Sonja Henie will have to look to her laurels, with the way Mary Ford and Anna Spencer skate around corners on our new glossy floors.

Mr. Everett Lane, Assistant to the President, spent his vacation in Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania.

Miss Dorothy Daly, together with Miss Julia Regan, a member of the Agency Department, flew over to New York to visit the Fair and spent several days of their vacation there, later visiting Atlantic City on the way home.

Miss Beatrice Cook, together with Miss Dorothy Trainor, our telephone operator, also spent a week of their vacation at the New York Fair.

Dr. Arthur H. Davison, our Medical Director, was in New York City last week attending the Medical Directors' Convention and spent one day at the Fair. He said many interesting facts relating to life insurance were discussed at the Convention.

We are very sorry to say that Mrs. Eleanor (Cox) Mullen of the Medical Department, who has been with us for some time, is leaving the Company on November 17.

Now that the golf season has ended, Mrs. Isabel Sullivan will continue with her Wednesday evening bridge parties.

Miss Marie LaBonte of the Bookkeeping Dept. was married on October 7, to Mr. Robert Hurley of Cambridge.

Recent visitors to the World's Fair were Misses Helen Toth, Nanna Saunder, and Marion Johnson.

Miss Ann MacInnis was married on October 21 to Mr. Walter Camuso of Revere. Her associates in the Bookkeeping Dept. tendered her a shower at the Cafe Marliave a few weeks before the nuptials.

Miss Mildred Parsons surprised us all by appearing on Monday morning, October 2, wearing a lovely diamond ring. Wedding bells will ring for her and Mr. Charles H. Adams sometime in the future.

Miss May McDonald of the Actuarial Department has been enjoying the World's Fair in New York. We hear she found it mighty cold down there part of the time.

Mrs. Hogan, the former Vera Marante of the Actuarial Department, was blessed with a baby girl last week-end. Congratulations, Vera!

The Misses Mary Murphy, Grace O'Connor, Marge Hurley, Mary Hart and Mrs. Kelso attended a bridge social at the Copley Plaza on Saturday afternoon. We understand that everybody had a pleasant time, especially Mary Hart who had the good fortune to win the prize at her table.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wiseblatt, Ordinary Desk Cashier, is retiring to assist her husband, Dr. Carl Wiseblatt. She has served the company well for 13 years and many of the policyholders will miss her. The Cashier's Dept. gave a farewell dinner at the Toll House and supper at Scituate. She was presented with an electric clock as a memento from her associates. Mary Forrest of the Cashier's Dept. will succeed Mrs. Wiseblatt.

Miss Mary O'Leary of the Cashier's Department visited the New York World's Fair on October 20 and 21.

Miss Emma M. Diamond of the Loan Department spent last week-end in Kennebunkport, Maine, visiting her sister.

At the opening convocation of the Boston Center for Adult Education, Miss Maude Stimpson of the Cashier's Department had three of her paintings on exhibition.

Statistician Malcolm Bowen and Mrs. Bowen returned last week from a week's tour by automobile. The itinerary included the Fair and the Catskills and Adirondacks.

Miss Virginia Garabedian has been very busy the past week helping on the Chelsea Bi-centennial Celebration. Virginia has invited friends to her home to enjoy the parade which has had to be postponed because of the weather. Unless there is a clear night soon, Miss Virginia will be worn out and will have a nervous breakdown.

LETTERS LIKE THIS MAKE OUR WORK WORTHWHILE

1634 South Street,

Boston Mutual Life Insurance Company,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:

I enclose papers, with signature, on my late husband's policy.

Thanking you for your favors and protection, courtesy and helpfulness. Thankful for a company that has a real square business morale.

Yours truly,
(signed) Christine Herben

AMERICA'S GREATEST PAYMASTER

In the year ended December 31, 1938, the institution of life insurance paid out in actual cash the staggering sum of $2,600,000,000—the largest pay envelope of any single business in the world.

The real heart of the great story of the justification of life insurance as an institution in our social order is the story of the hard cash it paid out in 1938.

We can draw many pretty pictures of any business in the world on the basis of paper figures, but the story of the cash it poured into the coffers of the world or nation is often a different one.

Yet it is the ability of a business to pay off in cold cash that is most important to the judgment of its existence; for it is the cash that a business puts in the pockets of the people whence it keeps the wheels of industry turning that means the most.

And in a year of "Recession", life insurance poured out cash, cash to buy food, cash to buy clothing, cash to pay rent, cash to keep factories running and pay envelopes coming; $2,600,000,000 it poured out to men and women of America.

For life insurance is America's greatest paymaster.

The percentage of mistakes in quick decisions is no greater than in long-drawn-out vacillations, and the effect of decisiveness itself "makes things go" and creates confidence.

I'll do the very best I can—the very best I know how. And I mean to keep on doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, then what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, ten angels swearing I was right would make no difference.

PRESENTED KEY TO CITY

Amesbury Honors Wm. Gray, Business Tycoon

William Gray of Brookline, for many years business tycoon, social leader and resident of Amesbury, Mass., was signally honored in the latter town, when on November 11 he was the central figure in a dignified ceremony conducted at the foot of the statue of Josiah Bartlett, signer of the Declaration of Independence. This statue stands in the square at the head of the main street in Amesbury. Surrounded by a large

When interviewed about his bridge playing prowess, Mr. Gray was less cryptic, and burst out with "Well, now you are talking right down my alley! I have this to say at this juncture," putting his right thumb between the 8th and 9th buttons of his double-breasted coat, he said he wanted to point out that the average bridge player's greatest fault is an inability to keep the count. "Bridge table tragedies occur because the declarer does not count his winners and losers. Possibly a novice cannot analyze the trick taking factors, but there is no excuse for an old war horse."

Then the old war horse told his son to blow three blasts on his trumpet, the driver to drive on, and off he went on his way to Exeter.

KEYS TO TOWN ARE PRESENTED TO PAIR AT AMESBURY

AMESBURY—A former manufacturer and a former state official were tendered the keys to this town in an unheralded ceremony last Saturday near the Josiah Bartlett memorial at the corner of Main and Sparkaw streets.

They were William Gray, retired, of Boston, former official of the Gray & Davis Co., of this town, and Jay Benton, former district attorney and now prominent in banking circles in Boston.

Guy E. Nickerson, general manager of the Amesbury Electric Light Co., a friend of the two, arranged the welcome. He learned that Mr. Gray and Mr. Benton and their respective families were going to the Exeter-Andover game and planned to place a wreath at the Josiah Bartlett memorial on their visit to this town. Mr. Nickerson received the cooperation of Chief John F. Hethernan and when the Gray and Benton cars stopped at the memorial, the chief was there to give an official welcome and to present large wooden keys, representing the keys to the town.

Both Mr. Gray and Mr. Benton expressed their appreciation and continued on to Exeter.

group of his friends and interested bystanders, Mr. Gray was given the official open-air hand salute and then on behalf of the municipality he was presented "The Key to Amesbury" by Chief of Police John F. Hethernan. The chief then made some appropriate remarks to Mr. Gray.

Mr. Gray was reticent about making any statement to local reporters as to the significance of the occasion, but directed his contact man, son Neal Gray, to blow a fan-fare on his trumpet and to tell the reporters he was "in conference" and could not be disturbed.

Subject of the mural was Exeter's successful football season. Shown here are three figures in defeat, represented by the colors of their jerseys, New Hampshire Freshmen, Hebron Academy and Bowdoin Junior Varsity. Twenty-five members of the Academy art classes collaborated on this project.

The Radio Club will probably not return to the Amen tower until after Christmas, and the much-talked of preparatory school network will probably never become an actuality. The reason given by David Benton for the continued absence of the Radio Club from the air was that the transmitter interferes with the reception of certain of the teachers' radios. Last Monday Robert Shmertz explained very clearly the makings and workings of a vacuum tube. The talk was well illustrated with schematic drawings. Judging from the number of questions asked by the 19 members present, the talk was a success.

Dear David:

Your Mother and I are so proud of your accomplishment. By sheer grit you became, out of a school of nearly a thousand boys, a member of the strongest football aggregation Exeter has had in years. It was the first time in twenty-one years that it was undefeated and untied. And it is four years since there was a victory over Andover. You and your Associates, nine other seniors, are the unsung heroes who did their full part and gave everything they had in building and moulding the team through a long fall of hard practice and preparation that resulted in the defeat of the school's greatest rival. As one Exeter man to another, I want to thank you for what you did to make this possible.

In the future you will realize more and more just how much good you got out of football. It puts character, and steadiness, and iron into a man that stays with him as long as he lives. You have made us all very happy by carrying on the way you did. It will be good to see you when you come home for the week-end of the twenty-fifth and, as I told you, the tickets for the Harvard-Yale Game have been applied for -- so we shall have a fine afternoon together.

With Love,

Logan Elected Co-operative Bank President

Former Building Inspector Succeeds Late Fred E.
Poor in Waverley Organization.

Succeeding his intimate friend, the late Fred E. Poor in the office, James R. Logan of 570 Trapelo rd, who retired July 1 after thirty-one years as the Town's building inspector, was elected president of the Waverley Co-operative Bank at a meeting of the directors Monday evening.

Mr. Logan, who has been an active director of the bank since 1917, was elected to serve out Mr. Poor's unexpired term and was sworn in for his new duties immediately. The annual election meeting of the shareholders is scheduled for December 13.

The new president is the sixth man to head the Waverley bank, which was opened for business in April 1896 as a small village affair and has grown steadily with the town under a conservative policy. The first president was E. O. Hatch, who was followed by Gustavus O. Holt, Thomas W. Davis, John P. Bradbury and Fred E. Poor, the latter holding the office from 1932 until his sudden death last August.

Only one member of the original board of directors of the bank is now active in its affairs. He is Walter F. Beetle, 82, who is still a director, and who has served for many years on the finance committee. The present clerk, Ulysses S. Young, however, has been associated with the institution since 1897, one year after it was founded. Irving F. Munroe, who was treasurer of the bank for thirty-eight years, retired last May 1 and was succeeded by the present treasurer, Walter E. Boright, who came from Framingham.

opened in January, 1924, and the interior was modernized this summer.

The newly elected president, Mr. Logan, and his wife have lived in their present home for the past forty years and have three married children living in Belmont. One son, Wendell R. Logan, was for several years manager of the Cushing Square office of the Belmont Savings Bank and is now at that bank's main office in Belmont Center.

During his thirty-one years as building inspector, Mr. Logan passed on 10,500 applications and inspected the construction of buildings involving approximately forty-four million dollars. On many of the town's streets every house was erected under his supervision. When the construction of the Cambridge subway started Belmont on its rapid growth and made a building code for the town essential, he played a leading part in drawing up a code which has made Belmont a town of well-built homes.

Upon his retirement as building inspector, he was tendered a testimonial banquet last July. At that dinner the toastmaster was his most intimate friend and associate, the late Fred E. Poor, whose place at the Waverley Co-operative Bank he has now been called to fill.

Scanning the Weather

The grasshopper weather-vane on old Faneuil Hall and the arrow above the Post Office building both pointed north early today, facing chilling breezes. Gray gulls, flying high, glided in graceful curves above the gilded dome as if to spy out what the gray clouds portended. Mercury in the official thermometer hung at the freezing mark at 7.30 A.M. up about two degrees above the night's minimum. Sunday, a perfect day, called great crowds into the open spaces to see the remaining foliage, now turned to rich brown. Millions, too, sought to view the Byrd snow cruiser trundling toward Boston. Highest temperature of the day was 46 degrees.

Coldest Nov. 14 Since 1905

The coldest weather of the season gripped New England today, with temperatures ranging from 10 to 19 degrees below freezing, and with one 10-below-zero reading atop Mt. Washington.

The weather bureau here reported an early morning Boston reading of 21 degrees, and said it was the lowest for the date since 1905, when the temperature dropped to 16 degrees.

Low readings elsewhere in the Northeast were:

Northfield, Vt., 14; Portland, 21; New Haven, 21; Eastport, Me., 20; Bangor, Me., 13; Hartford, 19; Burlington, Vt., 15; Providence, 20; Concord, N. H., 18, and Pittsfield, 14.

The Weather Bureau looked for continued cold today, with rising temperatures tomorrow.

High winds from the west-northwest brought a new low temperature for this month to Boston during last night and tossed freezing spray from whitecaps churned up in the harbor. Mercury in the official tube fell to 21.4 degrees, clipping 7.6 from the earlier mark. Ice formed on lee edges of ponds. Highest temperature on Monday was 41. In many localities a few miles inland temperatures between 15 and 20 were reported. Mt. Washington observers still in the clouds flashed word of a minimum 10 degrees below zero, with gales of maximum velocity 90 miles an hour, and light snow. November precipitation in Boston to 7.30 A.M. today has been 0.21 inch too light and that for 1939, thus far, 6.17 inches below the average, this despite a very wet October.

Tuesday, November 14th 1939

To town as usual and starting right in on the real estate meeting, and thus working through the day - to 4.30 when started for home - and coming out of the Harvard Square there was Herbert Rogers waiting for a ride home - and Frances came along in the car - she had been to the Del Castillos - another meeting of the Strawberry Hill Rain or Drive Bridge Club - so home

Herb came in for a libation. A lot of conversation about hanging a painting of Andrew Carney in the Big Living Room.

Dear Mom & Dad;

Everything is very quiet here now no compared to last Saturday. Of course I was very disappointed about not playing and not getting my letter. I really had my heart set on getting a major 'E' this year. We had a well bonfire and parade Saturday night. All the squad stood on a platform at the fire while the captain and the coaches made speeches.

There was a small price in Saturday's Exonian about me.

I may do some work this year as electrician for the Dramatic club shows.

Please send up my permissions for both the weekend and Thanksgiving as I won't have to rush around at the last minute. I will also be needing some money in a couple of days.

Marks go in today; its hard to believe the term is two thirds over.

I sure am looking forward to a week from next Saturday; it will be swell to home with you all again.

Love,
Dave.

Dear Elsie:

I have just dispatched a telegram to you letting you know that I have succeeded in securing accommodations for you and Chester at the Copley Plaza.

Boston is certainly going to be packed to the roof. The Ritz was out. Several days ago I was talking with Jack Sullivan who is on from the Argentines and is Chairman of the Board of the Forestall Company. When he comes to Boston he always hires a tremendously large suite, etc., etc. Ten days ago he had a terrific time to do anything with the Ritz people and that was the last chance. The Copley Plaza was also filled up. I got in touch with Frank Sawyer, President of the Checker Taxi Company, who is a very close and intimate friend of Arthur Race. He started to work on Race last night after you called, and I have just learned now at eleven o'clock this morning that in some way it has been worked so that you will have a good double room with bath as you wanted. I told them you would arrive Thursday evening, November 23rd, and leave some time Sunday, November 26th.

We are delighted that you are coming over, and you know how happy it is going to make Mary to have you and Chester at her momentous party.

I close with best regards to you and Chester.

Sincerely yours,

Jay R. Benton.

Using my Museum collection as a basis, I have recently published a story of fire protection in the early days entitled, "Engine! Engine!". With the hope that you may find interest in this modest contribution to the story that lies behind present-day fire protection, a copy of this book has been placed in the mails and you may look for its arrival.

Dear Mr. Smith:

I am delighted to have a copy of your fine brochure "Engine, Engine". It was good of you to send it and please accept my cordial thanks.

For years my father had in his collection the first hand-tub used in Belmont, Massachusetts, and among my prize photographs are those showing the local hand-tub company -- made up of the gay young married blades in the village -- golden days now gone forever.

Scanning the Weather

It was fun to watch the sky luminaries pop into view early last evening. The show began soon after the sun sank behind the low hills in the southwest, at 4.23 P. M. The new moon, three days old, hung as a bright sickle with the "old moon" faintly outlined, "in her arms." Great Jupiter, brightest of all stars and planets, came into view high in the south just on the stroke of five. Mars, red in the face, next was seen to the right of Jupiter, Saturn following, almost at once, at the left. These three planets appear now as directly in line and spaced evenly. Vega, a great star, next came out in the northwest, Capella and Aldebaran in the northeast, Sirius in the southeast, each twinkling in the clear air. In the north the Great Dipper appeared, and from then on countless stars, big and little, lighted the firmament. The night was slightly warmer than its predecessor. Boston temperature at 7.30 A. M. was 28, up one degree from the minimum. Highest on Tuesday was 37. Nov. 15, 1938, was 98 per cent clear, but was cool. It was the first day since Nov. 1 that was under par in temperature. The decline was caused by brisk west winds. The atmosphere was very dry. Highest Fahrenheit reading for the day was 44 degrees; lowest 33. C. H. B.

Scanning the Weather

A gentle breeze from the southwest early today, rippled inland waters but was not strong enough to waft aside the smoke and the light fog which settled over Boston, greatly reducing visibility. The sun shone through a thick haze which mellowed the usual morning glare. Temperature at 7.30. was 38 degrees. Wednesday's top notch was 46 and the minimum was 34. The first half of this November has averaged 2.8 degrees below normal and more than 11.5 below the same 15 days of last year—a very unusual variation. All the November precipitation to date came on one rainy, Sunday and was 30 per cent under par for the half month.

PETER- BELMONT JUNIOR High
 AT WINCHESTER-
 THURSDAY - NOV. 16, 1939

Since the 9th Grade football game scheduled for Wednesday with Melrose had to be postponed until next Tuesday because of the condition of the field after the snow, the only game open for discussion is that between Winchester Freshmen and Belmont at Winchester, which is herewith presented by Walter Anderson (9).

The Belmont Junior High football team lost to a light but speedy Winchester eleven at Winchester on November 16, 7-6. The two teams were well matched, and Belmont scored the first touchdown in the middle of the first period, with Buzzno plunging over from the five-yard line. The conversion failed.

Three times Winchester marched deep into Belmont territory, but each time failed to equalize the score. Finally in the fourth period, with three minutes to go, Winchester scored on a pass from the 20-yard line. They passed for the conversion as well.

Near the end of the game Belmont drove into Winchester territory, but wasn't able to make it count. Prelak, Buzzno, Galvin, and Holden should receive special mention, each having turned in a stellar performance. Eddie Holden's 63-yard kick was the boot of the day.

Lax Law Enforcement

This newspaper wants to know why Attorney General Dever and District Attorney Foley failed to take prompt action on the complaints against John Patrick Connolly and John F. Dowd.

It wants to know why it finally devolved upon the Boston Bar Association to initiate the proceedings which have disclosed the most shocking and sensational story of crime and corruption in this city since the celebrated Pelletier case 20 years ago.

On the evidence available there seems to be no excuse for the utter inertia of the duly constituted law-enforcement officers of the Commonwealth and county. There appears to be every reason why they should have acted swiftly and positively.

Citizens throughout Massachusetts have wondered how the laws could have been flouted with such brazen contempt and for such a long time without a move on the part of the proper authorities.

It is almost two years since the Connolly case originated. A year later the Dowd case developed. Yet nothing was done about either by any law-enforcement officer until after the Bar Association had forced the resignations of Mr. Connolly and Mr. Dowd by petitioning for their removal on charges that they extorted money from their subordinates.

Had it not been for the initiative and energy of the Bar Association, an outrageous racket, which had become common knowledge because of its scope and audacity, would still be operating today for all that the prosecuting officials had done to check it, and scores of Suffolk County employees would still be paying high tribute to hold their jobs.

Money was demanded and received from county employees under threat of discharge. Through a systematic campaign of intimidation they became virtual serfs, forced to raise the assessments levied upon them, even if it meant borrowing or mortgaging their homes.

Investigators estimate that the toll exacted in this manner exceeded $100,000. It seems incredible that most of the employees submitted silently to this wholesale robbery, but older workers feared the loss of pensions for which they would soon be eligible. A few revolted and complained to the prosecuting authorities, but nothing came of their complaints until the Bar Association conducted its inquiry.

This sordid situation is without parallel in the history of Massachusetts. The Bar Association has performed a public service of the highest character in exposing it and instigating the proceedings which have led to indictments by the grand jury.

But the mass of evidence, which was painstakingly gathered by the Bar Association under serious handicaps, was available much earlier and more conveniently to the prosecuting officers of the State and county. The Bar Association had no power to subpoena witnesses and compel them to testify. It had to depend solely on the power of persuasion to induce reluctant witnesses to give their evidence.

Yet the primary evidence on which the Bar Association built its case was called to the attention of Attorney General Dever almost two years ago by a group of young women who complained that they had been discharged because they had refused to contribute to Mr. Connolly's campaign fund. Mr. Connolly was an assistant to the attorney general before he became clerk of courts.

The attorney general advised the young women to take their complaint to District Attorney Foley. They did so, but they got no satisfaction. Subsequently, Senator Joseph A. Langone, Jr., filed an order in the Massachusetts Senate calling for a legislative investigation of the Connolly case, but it was rejected.

The attorney general did not relieve himself of responsibility by "passing the buck." He is the chief law officer of the Commonwealth. It is his duty to see that violations of the statutes are prosecuted fearlessly, vigorously and impartially.

Nothing was done until the Bar Association undertook its inquiry as a public duty last April. On June 16 last, the association filed the information in the Supreme Judicial Court seeking the removal of Mr. Connolly. On July 19, five days before the case was set for hearing, Mr. Connolly resigned.

Meanwhile, Mr. Dowd had taken office as sheriff in October, 1938. Like Mr. Connolly and District Attorney Foley, Mr. Dowd had an office in the Suffolk County Courthouse. His activities were the subject of widespread comment. But it was not the district attorney who first brought accusations against Mr. Dowd. It was the Bar Association. Mr. Dowd resigned last Monday, the day he was scheduled to appear before the Supreme Court. The evidence which the Bar Association had prepared to submit to the court was transmitted to the district attorney. Only then did the district attorney present the case to the grand jury.

District Attorney Foley says that the evidence in the Dowd case has "come in so fast and so well corroborated" that it has been possible to place it immediately before the grand jury. This is an extraordinary statement in view of his previous lethargy. He could have had access to the same evidence several months ago.

The district attorney says belatedly that he will present the Connolly case to the grand jury when the Dowd case is concluded. The Connolly case antedates the Dowd case by many months. It is now ancient history. If there is sufficient cause for presenting it to the grand jury now, why was it not presented before? The citizens of Suffolk County would like to know.

Meetings and Members' Luncheons
November 17, 1939

Meeting of the Committee on Meetings and Members' Luncheons Friday, November 17, at 12:30 p.m., in Room O, Chamber of Commerce Building. Present: Messrs. Frank W. Shepard (Chairman), Guy Bancroft, Jay R. Benton, Daniel A. de Menocal, William F. Goodale, Jr., John Crawford Webb and J. Paul Foster, Secretary.

A copy of the record of the last meeting had been sent to every member and since no one had any corrections the Chairman declared the record approved.

He then reported that Hon. Bruce Barton had agreed to be the guest speaker of the Boston Chamber of Commerce as soon as the special session of the Congress had adjourned, but now finds the pressure of personal business makes that visit impossible. However, it is the Chairman's intention after the first of the year to approach Mr. Barton again in the hope that at that time he can work out a definite date when the Congressman will be the guest of the Chamber.

Mr. de Menocal reported that he had been in touch again with Mr. William McChesney Martin, Jr., President, New York Stock Exchange, and Mr. Edward R. Stettinius, Chairman, Finance Committee, United States Steel Corporation, but that the situation had not changed respecting either. Therefore, he was marking time awaiting the opportunity when the situation will permit one or both to make a public address. Both want to come to Boston.

The Secretary reported that he had pleasanter news:- United States Senator Robert A. Taft will be the guest speaker of the Chamber Wednesday, December 13; Hon. Paul V. McNutt will be the guest speaker on a day in January to be named shortly after Christmas; Mr. Paul W. Litchfield, President, Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, will be the guest speaker on January 25 or February 1; Mr. Tom M. Girdler has accepted the invitation and will be guest of the Chamber some time in February, the date to be set early in January; and Mr. Wendell L. Wilkie and Dr. James Rowland Angell also have accepted the invitations of the Chamber and will be guest speakers late in January or in February, the particular days to be named early in January. The Secretary also reported that the sale of tickets for the Taft-McNutt luncheons was gratifying, as during the first twenty-four hours after announcements had left the Chamber 35 tickets had been sold for the Taft luncheon and 26 series tickets for both luncheons. From this evidence it seemed that both would be successful. He also reported that he had not carried further the Chamber's invitation to Hon. Raymond Moley because the latter now is connected with a speakers' bureau, and speaks only under its auspices for a fee.

The Chairman asked that a "head table director" be appointed for the Taft and McNutt luncheons; and it was unanimously voted that Mr. C. F. Adams, Jr. direct the Taft luncheon and Mr. Daniel A. de Menocal the McNutt luncheon.

The Chairman then requested suggestions of other possible guest speakers. Among those suggested were Hon. Hugh Gibson; Winthrop W. Aldrich, Chase National Bank of New York; F. B. Davis, Jr., President, United States Rubber Co.; R. R. Deupree, President,

Mr. Jay R. Benton
160 Congress St.
Boston, Mass.

Dear Mr. Benton:

There are two eclipses of the sun in 1940. The first is an annular eclipse on April 7. The central path begins at sunrise in the south Pacific Ocean, passes Christmas Island and contacts the North American Continent in the middle of Lower California. The path then crosses part of Mexico, passes into the US into Texas, passes over San Antonio, across the Gulf States and over the Atlantic Ocean at Jacksonville, Florida just before sunset.

On October 1, 1940 there will be a total eclipse of the sun. It begins at sunrise in Ecuador, passes across northern South America and leaves the continent at Pernambuco, Brazil. The path moves south over the southern Atlantic Ocean and cuts across southern South Africa somewhat before sunset time. At Pernambuco totality will last about 4 min. and 50 sec. The maximum totality will be 5m 35s over the ocean. At South Africa the duration will be about 3m 30s.

In Boston we shall see nothing of the total eclipse, but will have a partial eclipse at the time of the annular eclipse in April.

Very truly yours,

Fletcher Watson

*The next eclipse of the moon will be in 1941 - March 13. Mid eclipse 7 AM.
EST, only part of eclipse visible in Boston.*

Scanning the Weather

A great flock of clouds in the west took on trimmings of salmon and old gold as the setting sun's rays caught them from an oblique angle and painted them into a gorgeous picture. Thursday was a mild day with temperature mounting to 61 degrees in the afternoon, highest this month. Thin ice which had formed on many small ponds vanished as by magic. The unseasonable warmth continued until after midnight, when cool winds set in from the northwest. Boston's official thermometer showed a minimum of 44 degrees at 7:30 this morning and the mercury was dropping slowly. Barometric pressure also was decreasing. There were few clouds in the sky and humidity percentage in the atmosphere was much lower than on Thursday.

New Hampshire Coeds Take Over Harvard

Here are four of New Hampshire's 11 girl cheer leaders who stole the show during halves of the New Hampshire-Harvard football game yesterday by coming over to the Harvard side of the field to lead the Crimson rooters in the loudest "Regular Harvard Cheer" ever heard in the Stadium.

GIRL CHEER LEADERS INVADE STADIUM

These 11 co-eds led the cheering for New Hampshire as the Wildcats went down, 46-0, before Harvard in the Stadium yesterday afternoon. It was the first time that girl cheer leaders ever held the spotlight in a Harvard football game.

Dear Jay:

I am going to ask you to do me a favor. This year I am chairman of the 1908 Fall dinner, and want to try out a lower price and slightly different set-up of speeches. Naturally the more that come the greater the success of the dinner and the better the cross-section of opinion as to whether something slightly different is of value.

Would you please call up those on the enclosed list, less of course those names crossed out, and urge them to come. It might be well to emphasize the following points:

1. Price $1.50
2. Coach Stahley has promised to come.
3. John Kieran, sports editor of the New York Times will speak in Harvard Hall at 9. Those who want to hear him may adjourn and hear an exceptionally fine commentator, unhampered by over-convivial comrades, while those who wish to remain and be as convivial as they wish may do so unhampered by anything of a serious nature.
4. Business dress
5. Time 6:30, Friday, November 24, Harvard Club of Boston.

Time being of the essence, I have enclosed a post card so that I may know the number of places to have set up.

Thanks for your help which will count a lot in making the dinner a success.

Most sincerely,

Sunday, November 19th 1939

The usual routine - the Sunday papers - early breakfast in bed late. Orange juice - fried eggs - Bacon - fish balls - toasted English Muffins -iced Coffee. At ten o'clock I started working on stories for the Xmas Annual - and but for two interruptions kept at until 12.45 P.M. the next morning. The first break came at 12.30 when "Judge" Mullen, our next door neighbor these many years, dropped in ostensibly for a chat but really to sound me out to see if I would be interested in buying his house and land next door. Dinner at 2.30 Roast Beef. Mashed Potato. Gravy. Cabbage Broccoli Hollandaise - Caramel Parfait. Working all afternoon. At 5.30 Earle E. Stevens, the Guildhall storekeeper, called up from the Hotel Touraine, where he had been attending a Kiwanis Convention. So we asked him to come out for supper. He did. Joe & Eleanor came over. Everybody glad to see Steve. Had Welsh Rarebit - cold sliced Ham - Fish Balls. at 8 John and Peter took Steve ~~him~~ into the North Station. Worked to 12.45 on articles for the Xmas Annual.

am fully excited about next week-end and am going to bed every night very early, in order to be in shape to take
it. We plan to leave here ~~Thurs.~~ Thurs.
(23rd) at 12-noon but will go to Malden that night, in order to have the rest of the week-end free.
It will be great fun and after the scores today, the game should be a grand one.

Best love to you all and a thousand thanks for your kindness -
We are both most appreciative -

Dear Mr. Benton:

For the past five years the National Industrial Information Committee of The National Association of Manufacturers has been doing a constructive piece of work in a broad program of information to put business in a more favorable light before the public. Mr. W. V. Lawson of The National Association of Manufacturers has agreed to be here on November 20 to present before a small group the work that has been accomplished and the work planned.

I am inviting some friends for luncheon at the Union Club, 8 Park Street, Boston, to hear Mr. Lawson and would like to have you join us. I think that it will be interesting and beneficial to all of us to hear of these plans at first hand.

I hope very much that you will be able to attend and shall appreciate hearing from you at your convenience.

Dear Mr. Benton:

I understand that you are planning a cocktail party following the Harvard-Yale game next Saturday.

Although it is a little late, I would like to bring to your attention our Party Mart Service whereby we can handle the serving of all wines and liquors including a bartender, portable bar, additional glassware, etc., at considerably less cost than you could do it yourself.

The Liquor Mart is well known for quoting prices on all types of wines and liquors that cannot be excelled in Boston. We enclose a circular which describes more in detail the workings of this service.

If there is any further information you would like as to prices or anything else, please call me. I will be glad to come and see you.

Very truly yours,

Scanning the Weather

Sunday's sun went down, the centerpiece of a fantastic sky picture, between cloud formations which seemed to represent the outspread wings of the fabled phoenix, reaching high toward the zenith, their feathery whiteness tinted with crimson along the edges. The half moon, till midnight, nearly blotted out the red light of Mars, being in conjunction with that planet. The moon will be in conjunction with Jupiter tomorrow night and, two nights later, with Saturn, the three planets seen in line in the southern sky. Boston temperature was 27 degrees at 7.30 this morning. Highest on Sunday was 43. The sky was covered by light clouds increasing rapidly in density, with stormy weather and northeast gales predicted.

Scanning the Weather

A great circle ringed the half moon high in the south, during several hours, beginning at 5.30 yesterday afternoon. So wide was its scope that it took in the great planet Jupiter, a little to the east, and the planet Mars, to the west close to the outer edge of the halo. Even Saturn, to the east, was not far outside. The phenomenon, unusual only by reason of the size of the ring and the fact that few celestial luminaries were visible, was caused by ice crystals high above the earth, through which the moon shone with its reflected light. As night went on the haze deepened and all stars were hidden before dawn. Snowflakes (really frozen mist) so tiny as barely to be visible, began to fall at 8 A.M. and there was a raw chill in the air. The northeast storm which had been creeping up the coast dawdled along so slowly that its center was many miles distant, but storm warnings still were displayed. Boston temperature at 7.30 A.M. was 29 degrees, close to the night's minimum. Highest yesterday was 37.

Nov. 21, 1938, was 100 per cent clear and moderately warm. The prolonged Indian summer period was drawing to a close but two days of excess temperature remaining. Light to moderate breezes came from the northwest. Temperature ranged between 37 and 50 degrees in Boston.

The next meeting will be held at the Algonquin Club

Tuesday Evening, November 21st, at 6:30 o'clock.

Dinner will be served at 7:00 o'clock.

President George Willard Smith will preside.

For a real "behind the scenes" picture of the political scene in America in the fateful presidential year of 1940, there are few better equipped men in the United States than Raymond Moley, who will be our guest speaker. During the early days of the New Deal, Mr. Moley was Assistant Secretary of State, but his influence and power went far beyond the scope of this position. Chief of the original Roosevelt "brain trust," brilliant editor and author and an outstanding authority on national affairs. Mr. Moley is now contributing editor of "News-week" and Professor of Public Law at Columbia University.

The guest charge is $5.00 and you are welcome to have two at that figure and as many more as you want at $10.00 each.

An early reply on the enclosed postal card will be appreciated.

Often our dinners are delayed because members come who have not given us notice. Please telephone the Algonquin Club, COMMONwealth 2400 before 5:00 o'clock on the afternoon of the dinner of any change in your plans.

By order of the President,

Stoughton Bell,

Secretary.

OLD SANSKRIT

This thought was written in old Sanskrit hundreds of years before Christ. No one knows who wrote it, or exactly when it was written, but it applies to us in this modern day even more than to the Ancients of that time. Translated it runs as follows:

Look well to this one day
For it and it alone, is life.
In the brief course of this one day
Lie all the verities, all the realities of your existence—

The joy of living, the splendor of beauty, the glory of action.
Yesterday is but a dream—tomorrow is only a vision.

But today, well lived, makes every yesterday
a dream of happiness
And each tomorrow a vision of hope.
Look well, therefore, to this one day
For it, and it alone is life.

MONDAY NIGHT LECTURE ON RADIO POWER SUPPLY

Benton and Lindemann Talk to An Interested Group of Exeter Students

At the Radio Club meeting on Monday, David Benton, relieved by Carl Lindemann, lectured on radio power supplies. Illustrated with very clear diagrams, their lecture included the information needed on this topic for an amateur license.

Benton Speaks First

David Benton first explained why a filtered direct current plate power supply minimizes frequency modulation and prevents the emission of broad signals. Here Carl Lindemann took up the talk with a complete explanation of what is meant by voltage regulations of a power supply. Here Benton again took up the discussion to explain what effect poor voltage regulation in a power supply would have on a keyed oscillator.

Benton and Lindemann explained briefly the function of a filter in a power supply, the effect of an inadequate power supply filter, and why it is desirable to have separate power transformers for plate power and filament-heating purposes.

RADIO CLUB TO PROVIDE AMPLIFIERS FOR MEETS

The Radio Club is going to provide complete amplification facilities for all the track meets that are going to be held in the cage this winter. The equipment is ready and has been thoroughly tested.

Although the Radio Club is not on the air, St. Paul's School is keeping up the work of interesting more schools in a Preparatory School Network.

Taking advantage of the lack of activity in the Radio Club as a group, a good many of the members are either building new sets, or improving old ones, so that when the Radio Club gets back on the air broadcasting can be done on a large scale. Several members of the Radio Club are preparing to take examinations to become amateur Radio operators.

Blinding Snow and Wind Bring Winter Weather

A northeasterly storm, with blinding snow driven by the wind, this morning gave motorists a hard time of it on the highways and brought to pedestrians the chilly blast of early Winter.

The storm arrived last night and heavy flurries of snow will continue for most of the day, according to the weather man. An 18-mile wind whipped up the snow to give Boston a real old-fashioned Winter atmosphere.

Motorists heading over the turnpikes and major routes kept their headlights burning and almost had to crawl, visibility was so poor.

Wednesday, November 22nd 1939

This is a very funny day - weatherwise. Along about four and five o'clock - my bronchitis was cracking in great shape and I felt miserable in the early morning - so decided to have Dr. Hanson come over - check me up - and prescribe medicine for me. The Papers & Breakfast in bed. Orange juice - Shaved Eggs & Bacon. Buttered Toast. Dr. Hanson came in about 9.30 - Telephone the office - talked with Gertrude Jane. / asked him to have Bowen come out with the mail and accumulated magazines - Bowen arrived about 10.45 - gave him 2 envelopes full for Mr. Kant of the Western Newspaper Union and 1 for J. P. Gallagher of the Triumphant Engraving Co. Edna went up to Cushing Square shopping lunch at 12.45 - Half a Roast Sausages & Mashed Potatoes - Watercress. Bread fingers - Carrot sliced Lettuce Salad. Cream Cheese - Chocolate Eclair - Fig -

Scanning the Weather

Out of the blackness of a belated dawn feathery snowflakes began to flutter to earth. The night, away from city lights, had been intensely dark, clouds hiding from view the conjunction of the moon with the planet Jupiter, which would have been well worth seeing. Highways became slippery and motor traffic fraught with danger by daylight, the light snow melting as it fell. Precipitation for the 24 hours ending at 7.30 A.M. was but a hundredth of an inch, but more came later.

For the month, to 7.30 A.M., the total had been 1.02 inches which is 1.10 below the average for the period. For the year the shortage is more than seven inches, which makes it improbable that 1939 will be recorded otherwise than as a dry year. Temperature was 32 degrees at the morning reading. Highest on Tuesday was 41.

Didn't do much all afternoon but in bed fighting off the cold in my chest.

John brought out the evening newspapers — more insurance papers & magazines, the late mail from the office and some more news proofs from the Western Newspaper Union.
Dinner was good. Clear Green Turtle Soup. A glass of Sherry. Kidney Lamb Chop. Baked Potato fried egg plant. Chocolate éclair —
Ground covered with the snow — a light evening. Darned cold out and also in my room.

November 23rd 1959

Scanning the Weather

The heavy storm, with strong gales which touched the southeastern corner of Massachusetts, turned away to the broad Atlantic after giving Boston and its vicinity a foretaste of winter, spreading a light mantle of snow over much of the old Bay State. The clouds broke before dawn and the sun came into view through open spaces at frequent intervals. Should the sky be clear early this evening the moon, once more in its gibbous stage, can be seen in conjunction with the planet Saturn, high in the southern sky. It will be the third conjunction of Earth's satellite with a planet in less than a week. Those three planets, Saturn, Jupiter and Mars, maintain their position quite evenly spaced and nearly in a straight line. Later the display will include Venus, which now is too close to the setting sun for a good view. Boston temperature, at 7.30 A.M., was 33 degrees, lowest since midnight. Highest yesterday was 40.

Still feeling sick — Cold up in my head — Stuffed — headache. Read the "Herald" and "Post" — Jane brought up my breakfast. Orange Juice — Stewed Prunes — Fried eggs — Bacon — Buttered toast. John took in a large envelope of material to Quinett Lane — Called Everett Lane at 9.30 also "Red" Walsh at the Police Station about having the policemen here for Saturday evening —

Dear Jay:

I am again asking the Class of 1904 to respond to Dr. Perry's appeal for contributions to the annual Exeter Christmas Fund. The fact that the amount subscribed last year provided 43 boys with scholarships totaling $5000 ought to impress us with the importance of doing our share.

Our class can and should do a great deal better than we have heretofore, even in these times. Out of a total of 105 present members of the class, we have been averaging only about 15 contributors; not a highly glorious record. I should like to see every man respond with some contribution, even though it may not be as much as you would like to give. The idea is to show that 1904 is not lagging in loyalty and enthusiasm. What do you say?

The Fund is a great incentive toward the ideal of democracy at Exeter and tends to keep the school just what we would want it to be, just what it was where we were there.

So when you receive Dr. Perry's letter in the next few days don't let the fact that you can send in only a small amount stop you from doing so. AND DO IT AT ONCE SO THAT YOU DON'T FORGET IT. Their goal is at least 2000 subscribers. Let's do our part.

Sincerely,

*I bet Harman

Dear Mr. Benton:

The Annual Appeal of The Salvation Army for Maintenance Funds will come to its formal close on Friday, November 24, at a report luncheon on the 14th floor of the Chamber of Commerce at 12:20 noon.

Mr. Damon E. Hall, General Chairman; Mr. John E. Wilson, Chairman of the Industry and Finance Division; Mrs. Charles B. Barnes, Head of the Women's Division; Mr. Andrew S. Seiler, Chairman of the Metropolitan Division; Mr. Allan Forbes, Campaign Treasurer and their lieutenants and solicitors have all worked very hard on this campaign and I think it would be a splendid thing if the members of the Advisory Board were all present to help show their appreciation of the sacrifices that these people have made on our behalf.

Won't you make a special effort to be there on that day?

WORTHY OF AID

Three hundred and fifty-two thousand men, women and children were given the helping hand by The Salvation Army in Greater Boston, last year. What this means best can be visualized as illustrated by the Hon. Jay R. Benton, former Attorney General, who says:

"Assembled in West Point Cadet marching formation, column of fours, six feet between ranks, the 352,000 hungry, poverty stricken, sick, suffering, jobless, homeless, unfortunate aided last year by The Salvation Army would stretch from the State House, out along the Worcester Turnpike, beyond Springfield into the foothills of the Berkshires."

If one lets that long, wavering line of suffering humanity plod shuffling across the screen of the mind, it readily will be seen why The Salvation Army is appealing for financial assistance and why it is worthy of the help it asks in order to help others.

Scanning the Weather

In conjunction with the planet Saturn, the yellow moon, last evening, was the feature of a beautiful panorama. High in the sky, a bit to the east of south, the moon was seen a few degrees above the ringed planet, the latter showing as a tiny bright speck, its light dimmed by that from the moon. There could have been no better meteorological conditions for a view of the episode. Heavy hoar frost whitened roofs this morning. Wintry clouds gathered in the south, increasing rapidly in volume and density. Temperature, at 7.30 was 28 degrees, lowest in 24 hours. Highest Thursday was 42. Brisk breezes from the north prevailed, ice formed on sheltered inland waters.

Betrothal Will Be Announced at Tea

By CONSTANCE WINSLOW

The most exciting and romantic week-end of the entire autumn—for young smart setters—is quite properly topped today with the engagement announcement of a popular post-deb and a prominent member of last June's Crimson graduating class.

The Jay Rogers Bentons are opening their Belmont home for tea, following the game this afternoon, to announce the betrothal of their daughter, Mary, to Winthrop Strickland Jameson, Jr.

MARY WAS GRADUATED from the Buckingham school and made her debut at an Oakley Country Club tea dance. She has done volunteer work at the Boston Dispensary. Mary's grandfather was Col. Everett C. Benton; her great-grandfather, the eminent Boston banker, William H. Hill.

Her future bridegroom prepared for Harvard at Phillips Exeter, where his fraternity was Phi Theta Psi. A varsity player both at prep school and college in football and hockey, his Crimson clubs were Varsity and Hasty Pudding-Institute of 1770.

At graduation time Mr. Jameson was elected a member of 1939's permanent class committee. He is now a member of the faculty of the exclusive St. George's School, Newport, R. I., where many of the scions of this country's first-line aristocracy are educated.

Bulldog! Bulldog! Wow! Wow! Wow!!

By Coyne

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 25.—There was an overcast sky, a chill wind coming off the Charles River and some left-over snow at the south end of the Allston arena when the Yale and Harvard teams came out for their annual and traditional game. The players on the field were the lucky ones. They could run around and keep warm. The spectators could only cheer and congeal.

Harvard was a heavy favorite and Yale stock sank still lower when it was seen that Captain Bill Stack wasn't going to start at center for the Eli outfit. But the game was hardly under way before the Bulldog had the ball away down in Harvard territory.

The Crimson rooters said that it was all a mistake, and that's putting it mildly. Charley Spreyer, a native of New Haven but an undergraduate at Cambridge, was carrying the ball for Harvard and dropped it at the wrong time. Big Brooks fell on it for Yale and Old Eli had a chance to start something in a hurry.

Just a chance, that's all. But the Eli attack gained ground only in the wrong direction. Indignant Harvard tacklers rushed in and spoiled all the Yale plans, some of which were very well meant but poorly executed.

The Cantabs gained possession of the ball in a thoroughly legal way and apparently order had been established again in the Allston arena. Harvard would coolly—or perhaps coldly, considering the chill wind and the hint of snow in the air—run over Yale and put the Bulldog in the dog house for the day.

But somehow the Crimson machine couldn't get rolling, and Spryer, under orders, dropped back to kick on fourth down. Maybe the pass wasn't too good, or perhaps Spreyer's fingers were numb from cold. In any case the ball slipped through his fingers and Fullback Hank Wood of Yale recovered it on the Harvard 13-yard line.

This was indeed a shock to the Cantabs and their relatives and friends freezing above them in the stands. But once again the Eli offense was offensive only to Yale rooters. The best Harvard strategy at that point would have been to insist that Yale keep rushing the ball. They were carrying it just the way Harvard wanted it to go. President Conant and Coach Dick Harlow couldn't have done better for Harvard than the Yale backs and blockers were doing at the time.

Old Eli Puts One Over

But, of course, that couldn't go on all afternoon. Shortly after the second period started, the Elis went off on a touchdown march with no help or encouragement from Harvard whatever. And everybody wearing a blue jersey was a help to the Yale cause for a change.

The forward march began with a corking dash inside tackle by Hovey Seymour, who scurried to the Harvard 14-yard line before Crimson tacklers could persuade him to sit down and think things over.

Next came a neat forward pass from Freddy Burr to Al Bartholemy, who ~~was~~ downed inside the 5-yard line. A smash at the Harvard lost a yard, but, on the next play, Old Eli put over. It was a touchdown pass over the mid and Yale was leading by 6 points.

One-Play Kaye, the Yale placement kicker came rushing in to get the extra point and, ing kicked it, rushed right out again. So it 7—0 for Yale and Harvard didn't seem to be to do anything about it.

It wasn't until the third period that the son team could put on any sustained march. Taking the kick-off that started the second Harvard went 75 yards in a series of jumps. Torbie Macdonald broke away for a good run tossed two fine forwards that connected with Crimson outriders. But it all went for nothing when Hal Whiteman knocked down a fourth down Harvard pass in the Yale end zone and two Harvard fellows yearning to receive it.

This was a bitter disappointment to the Harvard cheering section and there began to develop a dreadful suspicion that maybe the expected Crimson triumph wasn't coming off. And if Harvard huskies didn't hustle, they would even get a tie.

The Crusher for the Crimson

The third period, starting with that long Harvard hike, wasn't finished before the big Eli fell on the Cantabs. A fumble in the Crimson backfield was recovered by Al Bartholemy, alert Yale end, and it was Yale's ball on the Harvard 20-yard line.

By this time Yale was all steamed up, confident of scoring an upset and enjoying the proceedings very much. The Harvard players were a worried and discouraged outfit. What they tried seemed to be just the wrong thing, the worst mistake of the moment.

When this opportunity to put over a crucial on the Crimson popped up in the third period the Bulldog didn't miss. Hal Whiteman Hovey Seymour plowed toward a touchdown. Freddy Burr carried it over but that one called back on a Yale offside. But what of Nothing could stop those Yale boys the way they felt. Hovey Seymour slammed over for clinching touchdown and once again One-Play Kaye came waltzing in to add the extra point for Old Eli. He didn't miss one of those season.

The third touchdown didn't matter except that it resulted from another Crimson error and added the final humiliating touch to the Harvard feat. Coach Ducky Pond and his merry men had everything their own way and the Harvard players, who began so confidently, were left to get away with their lives and their uniforms in the dusk. The lone Harvard score was hardly a consolation prize, all things considered. A lot of Yale reserves were getting their varsity letters when that one went by.

It wouldn't be fair to single out any player on the Yale side as the man who upset the Harvard appellation, but Hal Whiteman and Hovey Seymour certainly had a hand or two in it.

WAR in the NORTH SEA

A stirring drama of the seas is being enacted in the North Sea. First, it was the submarine torpedo; then the mine assumed major importance. The toll of shipping, neutral and belligerent, has been heavy, and Britain is concentrating her forces to curb the menace.

Many mines are washed ashore. The smoke cloud in the background above rises from a mine exploded by the Dutch coast guard. In the foreground is a live mine.

A North Atlantic Storm Whips Around Minots Light, Near Boston

Inside the Minots Ledge Lighthouse as this storm whipped waves high on the 114-foot structure the keepers, George H. Fitzpatrick and Elton H. Hegarty, stood guard. If they were nervous it was because they recalled the storm of 1851 when the old lighthouse toppled into the sea, drowning two keepers.

Scanning the Weather

Time: 4.30 P. M., Sunday.
Place: 14 miles north of Boston. It had been a perfect late November day, with sky clear and temperature normal. The sun had gone below hills in the southwest. The full moon, its apparent bulk greatly magnified, floated just above the eastern sky line. The grotesque, florid features of the man in the moon—sunken eyes, stubby nose and crooked mouth—all were set out in strong relief. Clear was the sky, from west to east, from south to north, all cerulean. High, to the south of the zenith, Jupiter's great white light—at 4.30 P. M., remember—was seen clear and steady, the only star or planet then in view. The sky was studded with stars in myriads two hours later, but Jupiter was dominant over all until it set, in the second hour after midnight. Alto-cumulus clouds floated high in the sky for two hours after today's sunrise when they disintegrated, leaving the atmosphere clear, cool and very dry. Temperature at 7.30 A. M. was 38 degrees. Highest yesterday was 48. Lowest last night 37.

Scanning the Weather

The acute shortage in 1939 precipitation, checked temporarily by a downpour at the end of October, has been increased by a very dry November and, at 7.30 A. M. today, amounted to 7.94 inches, or almost 21.8 per cent. There seemed little chance of any material change in the few hours of the month remaining. The month definitely will be recorded as cold, averaging between one and a half and two degrees under par, or at least six degrees colder than the very warm November of a year ago. Last night was clear, with the moon, the stars and three bright planets making brilliant lights in the celestial cyclorama. When morning came hoar frost whitened the ground, and ponds a few miles back from the ocean were skimmed over by ice. Boston temperature, however, did not drop quite to the freezing mark, the night's minimum being slightly under 34 degrees. Highest yesterday was 50. Conditions this morning indicated a fine day today and chances fair for good weather on Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving Day report on the State of the Union

Thursday, November 30th 1959

Woke up feeling pretty good. Read the "Herald" and the "Post" - Jane brought up my breakfast - Orange juice - Broiled egg on hash. Sausages. Chili Sauce - Hot Rolls - Ice Coffee. Up at 10. And John came back from the Belmont - Watertown High Game at Victory Field - took me back for the second half -

Watertown smothered Belmont with passes and won 25 to 7. So back home & after a while over to the Rogers - but stopped in first to call on Margaret Wheeler, whose husband Charles has had a turn for the worse. To the Rogers & much chatter - then with Joe & Eleanor to their house - then to Billy Keville's - greetings - with B. Keville's Tr & Tr. And the trophy - to Concord Avenue field - turned over the trophy - gave a "Pah" talk to the Waverley Squad - only stayed a little while - so had to get back home for our Thanksgiving Dinner. Table decorations were good. Heaps of straw. Corn cobs etc. Dinner fine. David went back to Exeter on the 6.15 -

Recruit Teams For Traditional Football Game

Season records will mean absolutely nothing Thursday afternoon when the Belmont Town Team and Waverley Club meet on the Concord ave playground for their annual classic, which started 43 years ago, because for both clubs the game will be the first, last and only game that they will play this season.

Probably the first time in many many years that the town has not had a semi-pro football team, these two clubs will try once more to find that imaginary line that is supposed to exist between Belmont and Waverley and to prove to the people what section of the town is supreme in football. Another incentive will be the Hon. Jay R. Benton-Col. William J. Keville trophy that was donated last year, and will be given to the first team that wins three successive Turkey Day games. The first leg on the trophy is yet to be gained, as last year's game ended in a scoreless tie.

In generations past, the game was looked upon almost in the same light as the world series, but in recent years the Belmont High-Watertown High game has put it more than slightly in the background.

Most of the boys who will answer to the opening kickoff around 2.30 o'clock, have grown up in Belmont, and at one time or another played important roles in Belmont High School football. Some of them later played in college.

In the past 38 years, Waverley has had little success with Belmont teams, having won but 8 while losing 23. Seven have ended in ties. The last Waverley Town Team win came in 1933, by a 6 to 0 score, and in the last 10 years the boys from the end of the car line have triumphed but once.

The customary challenge has been given and Belmont, the last team to win in the series has accepted.

The Belmont lineup as given out by Manager Jim Gately is as follows: le, Gilley; lt, Gately; lg, Dansereau; c, Pouhy; rg, Woolfrey; rt, Flynn; re, Dwyer; qb, Bill Burke; lhb, Casey; rhb, Aldrich; fb, Fitzgerald. Murphy, Helender, Powers, Waterhouse and Ed. Burke will be used as replacements.

Manager James Lettiere of the Waverley team will use Milton and Moskow in the end posts, Breen and Oteri at the tackle positions, Haney and Caveretta for his guards, with Major at center. In the backfield Rizzo will be at quarterback, Carroll and Castian in the halfback posts and Sliney in the fullback position. To date Schultz and Grant are the only replacements.

Before the game, Tony DiNatale, former Boston College captain and one of the best kickers in the east, will give a kicking demonstration. Frank Meehan, Tom Newell and Polly Harris will be asked to do the officiating.

The scores of the past 10 games follow:

1938—Belmont 0—Waverley 0
1937—Belmont 7—Waverley 0
1936—Belmont 6—Waverley 0
1935—Waverley 0—Belmont 0
1934—Belmont 12—Waverley 0
1933—Waverley 6—Belmont 0
1932—Belmont 13—Waverley 6
1931—Belmont 7—Waverley 0
1930—Belmont 13—Waverley 0
1929—Belmont 6—Waverley 0

Waverley Drops Traditional Game to Belmont, 13-0

The Jay R. Benton-Col. William J. Keville Trophy on which the Belmont Town Team won the first leg by defeating Waverley yesterday.

By defeating the Waverley Town football team 13 to 0, yesterday afternoon, the Belmont side of the town will be proud displayers, for one year at least, of the Hon. Jay R. Benton-Col. William J. Keville trophy, which will be formally presented to the Belmont team at a banquet to be held sometime in January. The trophy will become the permanent possession of the side that wins three successive Turkey Day games. The contest played on the Concord ave gridiron marked the 43rd annual meeting between the two sections of the town. Played before 700 spectators, the four 12-minute periods of play continued with not a single penalty meted out to either side, and with but one victim of injury during the entire contest.

Scanning the Weather

And now comes December in the guise of April, calm, clear and balmy. Inland waters were like mirrors, where they were not skimmed over by ice, as the sun surmounted the horizon, far around in the southeast. Temperature on the Thanksgiving holiday reached a maximum of 56 degrees. Lowest last night was 38. The reading at 7.30 this morning was 37. At that time there was a faint breeze from the west, the force of which was not enough to prevent smoke settling into the deep canyons that are Boston's busiest streets. Skies were clear over all New England. On the summit of Mt. Washington observers could see places 70 miles westward while to the east the range of visibility was but 20 miles. The departed November was cool and very dry, with temperature averaging approximately a degree below normal and precipitation only 34 per cent of the average amount. Precipitation for the first 11 months of 1939 was 8.18 inches below the long term mean. The period between sunrise and sunset has shortened to within 16 minutes of the year's minimum.

Scanning the Weather

A roaring gale from the southwest, attaining extreme velocity of 47 miles an hour, swept above Boston during last night, shattering the clouds of the week-end storm and driving the last vestige out to sea. Barometric pressure dropped very low, the official Weather Bureau minimum being 29.27 inches, with another observer reporting 29.18, at 1.30 yesterday afternoon. The storm yielded more than an inch of rain here, but was much more severe to the north. Boston temperature had dropped to a minimum of 47 degrees at 7.30 A.M., from Sunday's high mark of 57. The first three days of December averaged 12 degrees above normal.

A "COOL, CALM ANALYSIS"

WAR is booming business for newspaper and radio reporters. No personal discomfort, danger or inconvenience too great for them in their endeavor to get, transmit or interpret the news.

H. V. Kaltenborn, ace news-analyst for Columbia network, is typical of these men who feed on danger and excitement, never forgetting their objective — getting the news, and transmitting it to their public. In 1936, during harvest time in war-torn Spain, the Rebels were attacking the loyalist city of Irun. A fierce battle was being fought on farmland just outside the city. Shells, and bursting bombs dropped by planes, were churning the once calm countryside into an inferno.

Suddenly, a tall man dashed out from behind an abandoned farmhouse and sprinted for a distant haystack. It was Kaltenborn, equipped with earphones and microphone and dragging a cable attached to a transmitter in nearby Hendaye. He reached the haystack in safety, and under concealment gave network listeners an on-the-scene account of war. The incident is typical of his life. Wanderlust has sent him all over the world, and his resourcefulness and courage have won him many scoops as newspaper and radio reporter.

When 19 he ran off and secretly enlisted to serve in the Spanish-American war. A cattle-boat trip to Europe followed. After securing a job with a Brooklyn newspaper he decided a university education was desirable. Enrolled as a special student at Harvard, he won honors in public speaking and debating.

Kaltenborn's radio career began 18 years ago. He has interviewed Mussolini and Hitler, and has often broadcast over Moscow's Comintern station. He has also broadcast his personal talks with Mahatma Gandhi. Kaltenborn is one of the few Americans who managed to contact General Chiang Kai-shek for an interview. In China, Kaltenborn was captured by bandits and held for ransom. The money arrived in the nick of time to save him from a firing squad.

Kaltenborn speaks German, French and Spanish fluently. He is on the job in the danger zones of the warring nations and he will get that cool, calm analysis of the news through—in spite of hellsapopping.

SPEAKERS

Dr. Perry's annual informal but informative talks to the alumni at these Boston dinners have always constituted one of the delightful features of these gatherings. Dr. Perry recently completed a most interesting report on the development of the Academy during the past 25 years. Exeter men can count on an interesting and inspiring talk by Dr. Perry on December 6th.

DR. SAMUEL HAZZARD CROSS

Dr. Cross is Professor of Slavic Languages and Literatures at Harvard University. He has a national reputation as an authority on international affairs. He is almost as well known abroad as he is in this country. His topic will be "The Present World Situation."

DEAN NORMAN S. BUCK, Dean of Freshmen at Yale

Mr. Buck is Dean of the Freshman Year at Yale. A Yale graduate of 1913, he has ever since been connected with the University and has been an interested and enthusiastic observer of the educational progress at Exeter. His contact with Exeter men at Yale makes him a particularly fitting speaker at our Alumni Dinner on December 6th.

HAROLD B. GROSS

Mr. Gross was appointed Instructor in English at Exeter in 1938. He graduated from Exeter in 1926, from Williams in 1930 and from the Harvard Law School in 1933. At the Law School he was a member of the Editorial Board of the Harvard Law Review. It has been Exeter's good fortune that he elected to turn from the practice of the law to the profession of teaching. Mr. Gross will be the spokesman for the young teachers who are to be our guests of honor.

RALPH WARD, JR., Class of 1940, Exeter

As Secretary of the Christian Fraternity, Member of the Senior Council, Golden Branch Debating Society and Glee Club, Captain of this year's winning football team, member of the baseball and hockey teams, he is one of the outstanding leaders of the undergraduate body at Exeter.

29 Faculty Members Honored By Alumni of Phillips Exeter

The current crop of college freshmen is more serious in its quest for a personal philosophy and is displaying a much greater interest in religion than did last year's, it was reported last night to 250 alumni of Phillips Exeter Academy by Norman S. Buck, dean of the freshman year at Yale.

Dean Buck, addressing the annual meeting of the New England Alumni Association at the Chamber of Commerce, said administrative officers sensed the change but made no attempt to explain it.

Voluntary attendance by Yale freshmen at chapel, he said, had increased tenfold over last year's. Freshmen generally, he said, were more eager in their approach to social studies, and students with two or more failures at the current warning period numbered 23 as against 73 last year.

"It is with humility," he stated, "that we attempt to sense this changed situation and adapt our program to meet it."

With Oscar W. Haussermann, '08, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, as toastmaster, the meeting honored the 29 men appointed to the academy faculty within the past five years. A feature less formal but equally real was the celebration of an undefeated football season.

Other speakers were Dr. Lewis Perry, 25 years principal of the academy; Harold B. Gross, '26, representing the faculty guests of honor; Ralph Ward, Jr., '40, football captain, who spoke for the undergraduates, and Prof. Samuel Hazzard Cross of Harvard.

Cross, professor of Slavic languages and literatures, concluded his analysis of world conditions with the opinion that there was nothing in this war for the United States, but that our job, at its end, would be to use our influence to prevent a repetition of the blunders of Versailles.

Turning to a discussion of the Russian invasion of Finland, Prof. Cross said: "If it is true that Russia asked for the right to establish bases in the Baltic states and Finland as early as last summer, then the British were singularly disingenuous in not disclosing that fact the minute the Russians stepped foot into Poland, thus letting the world know what to expect."

He saw no hope of Germany's submarine or mine forces breaking Britain's maritime mastery, and said, "The use of armed merchantmen, objected to by old ladies of both sexes, is estimated to reduce the efficacy of the submarine by five-sixths."

Officers elected for the year are:

Prize Hens Returned —Express Collect

ROCHESTER, N. H., Dec. 6—Dr. Sumner W. Pratt was pleasantly surprised today to learn that three of his prize hens, stolen two weeks ago, had not finished their careers as the main course of a Thanksgiving dinner. An express truck stopped before the doctor's house today and unloaded the three prize birds, alive and scratching.

Without any accompanying explanation, the hens had been returned from Dover—express collect.

Joseph T. Walker, Jr., '14, president; William M. Rand, '05; Eugene T. Connolly, '08; Royal W. Leith, '08; Randall T. Cox, '22; F. William Andres, '25, and Dr. F. A. Simmons, '25, vice-presidents; Donald T. Field, '27, secretary, and John M. Parker, '2d, '28, treasurer.

With the younger faculty members, other guests of honor included Dr. W. L. F. Field, headmaster of Milton Academy; Dr. Francis Parkman, headmaster of St. Mark's School, and E. K. Hart Fessenden, headmaster of Fessenden School.

I was very sorry to read in the newspapers that you were obliged to undergo an operation, but glad to see that you are getting along well. Dear Mr. Benton:

From baseball contacts last summer and through our mutual friend Judson Hannigan of Boston, I feel free in contacting you about baseball this coming summer.

I have already written to Mr. Hinkley stating that I would be glad to listen to any overture made to me relative to baseball managership this next summer.

I have had experience in minor and major leagues, and feel as if I had rather a successful season at Groveton, and that the same thing can be done at Lancaster. I would not be asking for any proposals if I did not think that I could successfully do the job.

If there is anything you could do in having them consider me I would be grateful.

Yours sincerely,

My only contact with North Country baseball is when I go up with my family on Summer vacation for a few weeks at Guildhall, Vermont. I have no direct tie-in at Lancaster.

I would like to have you know that my friends and I thought you did an excellent job of management with the Groveton team.

Dear Mom & Dad:

So far, this week has been a hectic week for me. I have been working on the production staff of the Dramatic Society as an electrician wiring up the stage for the Ball Play. In addition to this I have been building and setting up an amplifying system for the "Royal Exorcism". These two things coupled with my studies hardly leave me time to eat.

To top it all off yesterday morning I didn't wake up until five minutes past eight! Consequently I missed chapel and part of my English class. However I got out of that O.K. because the school clocks and bell systems were on the turn.

As is the custom two weeks before vacations all the teachers are piling on the work.

We gave our first choice for college Monday.

I have to have my Senior class picture taken at Cunningham's before Xmas. I'll need some money for this and laundry etc. by Saturday.

Do you want me to send home an Xmas list? Gosh, that vacation seems so far and yet so near.

I suppose the less I think about it the quicker it will come.

That sure was a great Thanksgiving.
I guess we all had a swell time.
Give my best to all.

Love,
Dave

Scanning the Weather

Temperature hovered near the freezing mark through the clear night—a little above in the official thermometer, a little below in suburban areas. Venus joined the triumvirate of planets—Saturn, Jupiter and Mars—which have been placed so prominently in the firmament for several weeks. Far in the southeast Venus could be seen soon after sunset, but setting before six o'clock. Conditions for viewing all four through a telescope were excellent. Clouds gathered slowly early this forenoon and barometric pressure was decreasing. Temperature at 7.30 was 34 degrees, up a notch from the night's lowest. Highest yesterday was 44. The first six days of the month have averaged nearly eight degrees too warm.

Fort Lauderdale, Florida

Dear Mother:

Tremendously busy or note, I must delay no further in sending you a letter. Well, I have had my first cold of the winter. Was laid up from Monday noon, November 20, to Saturday morning, November 25. I missed on Monday a luncheon at the Union Club staged by President Spencer of the First National Bank, a meeting of the Boston Bar Committee that afternoon; Tuesday, the dinner of the Commercial Club at the Algonquin Club; Thursday, a dinner meeting of the Executive Committee of the Middlesex Club; Friday, the annual Harvard 1908 dinner. Saturday, the 25th, went to the first half of the Harvard-Yale game -- it was bitterly cold. Mary's engagement party was excellent -- from 5 to 7 about 300 came in. Mary had 35 boxes of flowers, including some from Governor and Mrs. Saltonstall, and equal number of engagement presents.

Last Saturday afternoon Frances and I went over to Newton to the engagement party of Miss O'Connell and Billy Keville, Jr. Then hurried home, dressed and in to the Algonquin Club to the annual meeting of the Beacon Society. Was elected President. You have no idea how much I appreciate this honor and almost wholly because Father was president in 1908 and 1909. This Tuesday evening was a guest of the State Street Trust Company at the annual dinner of the Massachusetts Bankers Association at the Hotel Statler. Beforehand we gathered for an hour at the home of Charles Francis Adams, 177 Commonwealth Avenue. David was down from Exeter for Thanksgiving. Went to the last half of the Belmont-Watertown High Game, and in the afternoon went down to Concord Avenue to present the Belmont-Waverley Trophy, but only stayed briefly.

Last evening was the annual Exeter Alumni Dinner at the Chamber of Commerce -- was re-elected to the Advisory Board. This afternoon, Belmont Library Trustees Meeting. Tomorrow, annual dinner dance at the Hotel Continental of the Belmont Branch of the Florence Crittenton League. Monday to go to the dentist; at noon, insurance luncheon conference at the University Club; evening, Directors' Meeting Waverley Co-operative Bank. Tuesday go over to New York with Frances to the annual meeting of Life Insurance Presidents at the Waldorf Astoria, returning on either Friday or Saturday.

Now to answer the inquiries in your last letter:-

No, the cover on the "Live Wire" is from a photo bought from a Philadelphia concern. All seem to think the view is at the University of Pennsylvania.

What do you mean you can't sing any more. A lot of people over 50 after 2 or 3 cocktails gather in groups and think they are singing. But the howls and discords that come out can in no way be considered music. The old Journal came back intact. I have a press clipping of the Memorial Window -- but the article did not say who gave or raised the money. Father's portrait is in the house safe and sound. We have had some cold weather but have been spared the snow so far. I do not mind it after the turn of the year.

The Company's affairs keep me busy -- ~~these~~ outside meetings seem to pile up in December and January. When or how I shall get my Christmas shopping done I do not know. I went to the Old Corner Book Store yesterday to get the English Xmas Numbers, but because of the chaotic ocean transportation conditions, they have not yet arrived. I shall presently be shipping your Xmas present and I hope you will like it.

This is a pretty hurried and factual letter -- but it will bring you up to date, and so I shall close with the best news of all -- that all the Benton families in this neck of the woods are in good health. John recently passed his State Broker's Examination -- has his license and Monday started out on his own. He has his own private room at O'Brien, Russell's and a stenographer. Time Marches On.

Affectionately,
Your Son,

Scanning the Weather

Naked branches of deciduous trees on Boston Common twisted and swayed in the high winds which swept over the city this morning. In the suburbs the boughs of great pines bent and billowed before the onslaught. A velocity of 52 miles an hour was recorded at 5.50 A. M. Meteorologists class that as "a strong gale." The sky was covered by ragged black clouds which raced ahead of the westnorthwest gale, occasionally releasing squalls of snow. Barometric pressure was very low, being recorded officially as 29.36 inches at 7.30 A. M. Temperature at that time had dropped to 37 degrees, from Thursday's high mark of 47. Wind far in excess of minimum hurricane velocity prevailed on Mt. Washington this morning, highest being 100 miles an hour. It was snowing hard and temperature was 2 degrees. Real winter there!

Boston Mutual Increases Sum for '40 Dividends

For the year 1940, the Boston Mutual Fire Insurance Co. will continue its present dividend scale on its ordinary insurance in force. President Jay R. Benton also announces that the directors have voted to pay a slightly higher dividend on its industrial insurance over the previous year. The total sum to be set aside for dividends for 1940 will exceed $220,000 as compared to $204,872 for 1939.

The directors also voted that dividends left to accumulate will bear interest at 3½% per annum, and the interest distribution on other funds held on deposit will be at the same rate allowed during 1939.

For the first ten months this year, insurance writings increased $2,981,158, bringing the total insurance in force to $89,241,469.

Scanning the Weather

Railroad trains coming in from the north this morning bore evidence of snow and wintry weather in that part of New England. Wind came from the north and early in the forenoon a few flakes of snow were intermingled with light, cold rain here. The moderate storm had brought to the Mystic estuary a flock of several hundred black ducks, moving south. Having reached a maximum temperature of 50.6 degrees on Sunday Boston's official thermometer showed a minimum reading of 34 at 7.30 this morning. Rain began to fall at about the time the moon changed yesterday and had yielded about a third of an inch. Sunday averaged 11 degrees above normal.

Bert Lahr is the comedian No. 1 of the musical show which is known as "Du Barry Was a Lady."

THE PLAYBILL

FORTY-SIXTH STREET THEATRE

Frances and Jay. Tuesday Evening - Dec. 12 - 1939

THEATER

ETHEL MERMAN PLAYS MADAME DU BARRY, MISTRESS TO KING LOUIS XV OF FRANCE.

HERE SHE SPURNS THE LOVE OF BERT LAHR WHO DREAMS HE IS LOUIS THE LADY-KILLER

THIS IS HOW FRENCHMEN HAVE A GOOD TIME, ACCORDING TO BERT LAHR'S DREAM OF COURT LIFE AT VERSAILLES. LOVELY GIRL IS AUDREY PALMER IN "DANSE EROTIQUE"

Bert Lahr dreams he is King Louis XV disporting himself at Versailles in a garden full of French dancing girls. Here he enjoys his kingly prerogative of tickling a pretty subject's ankle.

In his nightcap and nightshirt Bert Lahr enjoys a bit of snuff. Ethel Merman (right) in his dream is the same girl he loved in real life, but she still gives him the cold shoulder.

In Du Barry's bedroom, Lahr pursues Ethel Merman round and round the room and over the top of her head. Here Lahr gets shot in the back by an arrow which someone has hidden in a closet. Here the court physician gives him a prescription for his cold.

On the night of his heavy date, Bert Lahr gets shot in the back by an arrow which someone has hidden in a closet. Here the court physician gives him a prescription for his cold.

LAHR'S DRINK IS ABOUT TO TRANSPORT HIM FROM WASHROOM TO VERSAILLES

OLD AND NEW STARS MAKE "DU BARRY WAS A LADY" COLE PORTER'S LUSTIEST HIT

At some future time historians will consider the musical shows of Cole Porter as important social documents. Sober professors will wonder why on earth a famous Porter love song called You're the Top had these lines of endearment: "You're an Arrow collar . . . you're a Coolidge dollar . . . you're Camembert." And in a later musical comedy called Du Barry Was a Lady, which opened in December 1939, students will find topical songs mentioning du Pont, Hearst and Deanna Durbin, and wonder why people sang about them then.

For audiences of today Du Barry Was a Lady, Porter's newest show, offers no such problems. It offers instead a new star from Hollywood named Betty Grable, Jackie Coogan's ex, who can dance and sing like a May breeze (see front cover). It offers a score that lacks Porter's usual sultry torch songs, but is full of gusty tunes. Its story hops from the free and easy air of a New York night club to the free and easy air of the French court at Versailles during the reign of Louis XV. And it offers two musical-comedy veterans, Ethel Merman and Bert Lahr, in top form.

Lahr plays the part of a washroom attendant who wins the Irish sweepstakes but can't win the girl he loves. He dreams that he is Louis XV and his girl is Madame Du Barry. But although Du Barry is his mistress, she remains unattainable. Starred in her third Porter show, Ethel Merman as

THEATRE WEST 45th STREET

MATS. WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

¶ The Hotel Piccadilly welcomes you to "Piccadilly Circus." We are proud to offer you this room. Designed by Thurston Munson, it represents the newest in comfort and beauty. It's story is interesting.

¶ The original Piccadilly Circus is the "Times Square" of London. The origin of the name is lost in antiquity. One authority suggests that it all came from Peaked Hill — another tells a rambling tale of a tailor who made a great deal of money selling Pickadillyes — a type of collar in vogue at the time. He did build a Pickadillye Hall alongside of Bakers and Tart Hall. Curiously the hem of a woman's skirt was also called a Pickadillye, which leaves much to individual conjecture.

¶ Always carrying a reputation for lively, gaming and pleasant society, the Circus rose to its greatest fame in the Nineteenth Century with such names as Oscar Wilde, Lord Byron and Beardsley. Illustrative of this sophisticated period are the glass and enamel decorations which, in a manner of today, depict the maids and blades of this other era.

¶ Mr. Munson's mural humorously interprets the Piccadilly Circus of today. Through a tracery of grapevine one sees Pan and his favorite Dryad, famed revelers of once upon a time, gazing with amusement at the antics of their Piccadilly descendants. We can imagine their reaction to the diners, the musicians and entertainers of this more fully clothed but not so different world. In the distance, beyond these gamblers of the English pleasure place, is the actual Piccadilly Circus.

¶ Various facts influence our choice of a name for this room but chief among them is the hope that this new Piccadilly Circus will bring you the pleasure and "Merrie Good Times" that have so long typified its namesake.

This grilled mode of entrance has been J and C's gate-of-arms for a decade. Think of that while you go into a huddle with the cigarette that "never gets on your nerves."

• Section 100 of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Law (by which we are governed and to which we must adhere) provides:

"No licensee selling at retail shall sell, deliver or give away or cause, permit or procure to be sold, delivered or given away any alcoholic beverage on credit . . ."

Jack & Charlie's

The 21 Club

A S YOU ease in, you may bump right into Jack (left), who blinks an approving eye on people who smoke Camels for digestion's sake or Camel's. He doesn't hesitate to admit that "Costlier tobaccos must be preferred by people who come here. They all seem to smoke Camels." Charlie stands by Jack. Next-elbow is Mac, partner in the higher mathematics of "21." Jack and Mac are brothers Kriendler, no less.

MAYBE you're an eschewer of stairways. If so, stalk straight back to the Puncheon Grotto where red tablecloths lead checkered careers, men are (Camel) Men, and women smoke the same mild way. The sweetest trick of the meek is to sit up front where you can see all who are going on. Don't miss the gifties strung across the Grotto, especially the thousand-dollar bill heartlessly framed and out of reach. After staring at it longingly and hard, set yourself right with a Camel. Its mild, delicate flavor makes you realize that Money Isn't All.

EATING can easily become a habit at "21." Like that famous cigarette that keeps popping up in these columns, their food "never tires your taste." Be French at noon, Hungarian at night. With a persistent change in diet, you could soon be a gastronomically naturalized citizen of the League of Nations.

Dear Mother and Dad,

Everything was peaceful on your first day away from home. Last evening a Mr. Herbert Rogers of Townsend Road, Belmont, called to inform me that an Appraiser was coming in to look at the Grandfathers Clock. I will let you know the result of the same as soon as possible.

Last night, Pete and I took in the Hockey Game at the Garden, very dull affair, but I think Pete got quite a kick out of it.

We will all be glad to see you on Saturday, and send our love.

Affectionately,

John

LOOKING at yourself on the way out, you may detect beads of frustration on your otherwise pleasant brow, which mean that you must see all seven dining rooms or go gaga. So, with a Camel clutched in your chubby little hand—(staying firmly packed, not shredding a bit)—you give yourself a “lift” to the Upper Level where you sit knee-deep in damask. Here you find yourself indulging an errant taste for Higher Thoughts on the old silver and culinary joys that flank you on every side. Food in any shape reminds us that smoking Camels increases the flow of digestive fluids—those alkaline d. f.’s that keep you and your digestion practically in love with each other.

Dear Mom + Dad,

Quite a lot has happened since I last wrote to you.

The play went off very well. I'm enclosing a program. The analyzing system for the "Royal Examiners" created quite a furor especially among the teachers. This was the first time in the history of the school that this has been done.

It might interest you to know that in an exam covering all years work, given to all the chemistry III. classes, I got the second highest mark in the school. I missed being first by one point but was five points above the second man in my own class.

I received an invitation to the football banquet to be held at the club next Friday.

Everyone is all set for xmas vacation.
I think half the school is packed already.

We are getting our last pile of tests. I have five more between now and Saturday.

I received notice of my election to the Dramatic Association yesterday.

Although it has not been announced yet I am President of the Radio Society and Carl Lindemann is vice president. He and I are going to have a contest during vacation to see who can contact the most distant stations. By the way Carl was one of my students last year in the radio lectures. (He only one who took the exam)

Get the "net. log" ready; I'll be home in less than a week.

Give my best to all.

Love,
Dave

Dear Mr. Benton:

Wednesday:

Dec. 13, 1939

I am tempted to address this letter as did someone who wrote to you in a letter which came in this morning viz: "Hon Jay R Benton Editor Xmas Annual". The mail this morning, so far, has an even dozen letters which bear unmistakable earmarks of being responses to the Annual. The 'phone calls expect momentarily.

I enjoyed a close examination of the Annual more than I can tell you. I judge that everyone else will get a big kick out of it, particularly those either mentioned or acquainted with the names in the news.

Everything is smooth and quiet here, with nothing to disturb your enjoyment of the Xmas.

My kind regards to Mrs Benton.

Sincerely

Everett *

The Lounge Café

An ideal meeting place at the "friendly hour"; attractive too for lunching and informal dining.

The dominant color scheme of this room is carried out in blue mirrors and jade green floor. Tables, topped with green rubber, have amusing cartoons by Tony Sarg.

The decorative scheme of the Lounge Café is enhanced with walls covered with shell from the Phillipines, known as Kappa gold. The ceiling is of gold and blue mirrors.

THE Wax Museum is the counterpart of the famous New York City of the famous Grevin in Paris and the Musee Historique Canadien in Montreal, the managers of both of which have taken an active part in the establishing of this latest genre of wax works. The artists who have created the scenes and figures and supervised the details of execution are the same who completed the scenes for the Museums in New York and Montreal: Mr. Albert Chartier, sculptor, and Mr. Robert Tancrede, painter. The figures were actually made in the studios of the Grevin Museum. Meticulous care has been taken to attain not only beauty but historical accuracy as well. In fact, many of the costumes, such, for example, as that worn by Louis XVI in the scene in which he is receiving Benjamin Franklin, are exact reproductions of the period.

- Briefly, the Museum presents a panoramic view of American history at once fascinating and dramatic. An additional feature is the inclusion of exhibits representing personalities of current interest here and abroad. For instance, the present King of England will be there in the near future, as well as Colonel Lindbergh, the late President Hayes, President Roosevelt and numerous prominent figures of the screen, stage and sporting world. In all these figures, past and present historical importance and particular attention has been given to the accuracy and life-like portraiture.

- The need for such a museum in New York has long been felt and the management are confident that their contribution to both education and entertainment will mean much to the community.

THE Wax Museum is the counterpart in New York City of the famous Musee Grevin in Paris and the Musee Historique Canadien in Montreal. the management of both of which have taken an active interest in the establishing of this latest gallery of wax works. The artists who have created the scenes and figures and supervised the details of execution are the same who completed the scenes for the Museums in Paris and Montreal: Mr. Albert Chartier, sculptor, and Mr. Robert Tancrede, painter. The statues were actually made in the studios of the Grevin Museum. Meticulous care has been taken to attain not only beauty but historical accuracy as well. In fact, many of the costumes, such, for example, as that worn by Louis XVI in the scene in which he is receiving Benjamin Franklin, are actually of the period.

- Briefly, the Museum presents a factual panorama of American history at once fascinating and dramatic. An additional feature is the inclusion of exhibits representing personalities of current interest here and abroad. For instance, the present King and Queen of England will be there in wax, as well as Colonel Lindbergh, the late Cardinal Hayes, President Roosevelt and numerous prominent figures of the screen, stage and sporting world. In all these figures, of both present and past historical importance, particular attention has been given to exact and life-like portraiture.

- The need for such a museum in the city of New York has long been felt and the management are confident that their contribution to both education and entertainment will mean much to the community.

The Little Foxes

TALLULAH BANKHEAD HAS HER FIRST U.S. HIT

An astrologer told Tallulah Bankhead in 1923 to go to England. And since this glamorous, golden-haired daughter of a U. S. Congressman from Alabama had acted five years on the New York stage with only indifferent success, she packed up her bags and went.

In England she became overnight a phenomenal success. Her pathetic waitress in They Knew What They Wanted put all London at her feet. Queues waited 36 hours outside the gallery doors to see her. Police cordons guarded her from worshipers. Plays like Her Cardboard Lover, The Green Hat and Camille made her the rage of all Britain, in their eyes America's greatest actress.

But eight years ago Tallulah Bankhead, tired of England, packed up her bags and came home. Two years in Hollywood were unsatisfactory. A half-dozen plays in New York were more or less flops. Somehow it seemed impossible to find adequate parts for this strange electric woman with the languid eyes, the panther's step and the siren's husky voice.

But now in Lillian Hellman's The Little Foxes she fills, for the first time, a role carved big and fierce enough for her talent (see cover). As the Lady Macbeth of a Southern city at the turn of the century, she is sister to an avaricious clan of financiers who destroy what they cannot conquer. She schemes with her shady brothers to build a cotton mill, tries to bully her mortally ill husband into joining them, outwits her own kin at their double-dealing. Against the cold, steely force of the year's strongest play, the glitter of her acting lights up a whole era of U. S. history.

Ruthless Regina, greediest of the Hubbards, entertains a Chicago financier who is willing to put up $400,000 for a cotton mill, providing the Hubbards raise $225,000 more. Dreaming only of power and wealth, ambitious Regina forces her two brothers to promise her 40% of their interest for getting a third of the money.

Pathetic Birdie (seated), daughter of Southern plantation aristocrats, discovers too late that bullying, greedy Oscar Hubbard married her only for her cotton fields. A symbol of the old agrarian South that was conquered by relentless industrialists, she has taken secretly to drink, is a warning to Alexandra to flee her home. Alexandra does.

Wily Ben is the oldest and smoothest of the Hubbards, but not quite a match for his sister. In the end she uses his theft of her husband's bonds as blackmail for getting 75% of the Hubbard mill shares. But though the unscrupulous Hubbards gouge and cheat one another, they present a united family front against all competitive outsiders.

Dear Mother & Dad:

That newspaper of Dad's has caused some excitement up here. Torrance Parker and Jack Hennessey called last night about it, and Neal O'Hara mentioned it in his column. Jack Hennessey, especially, raved about it.

Nothing has happened at home. Nicky went to the movies yesterday. John and Pete went to the hockey game Tuesday. All I have done is work and go to bed.

I hope you are having a swell time, in fact, I know you are. Give my love to the Rahrs. We will be looking for you tomorrow night.

Jay Benton's Christmas Card

It isn't considered respectful to speak lightly of a competitor and heaven forbid, this isn't our intention but last Wednesday, our somewhat tired staff, burdened with the biggest business week of its career, almost revolted in the name of real old-fashioned newspaper ethics to allow the first edition of the esteemed Jay R. Benton's Christmas Annual and Fireside Companion to substitute for the Friday, December 15, edition of the Belmont Herald. They said that this newspaper owned, managed and edited by our old friend Jay R. Benton was ample to take care of the reading requirements of the Belmont people.

For a while Wednesday, there was considerable discussion as to whether or not the staff would win out, after all a paper the likes of Jay's doesn't come out every week in the year. However, after a round table debate with the praise for the Benton's Christmas Annual reaching new heights, it was decided to go ahead with the Herald and offer Jay Benton a job heading the staff.

A newspaper, or for that matter any sound business, should welcome healthy competition but we hope that Jay doesn't continue in the journalistic field, our job is at least as good as the WPA. But we hope to survive the shock of the first Christmas Annual and wish to state here that it was an idea that only Jay Benton could think up and work out successfully.

In these days of war and hard times, it shows what is in the minds of true Americans like Jay Benton. Instead of surprise attacks from air raids or warships, the popular former attorney-general gives his friends a surprise in the form of an eight-page newspaper written for them and given to them. It is true American and Christmas spirit, and we hope that Jay's Christmas is as happy as he made it for his friends, but for heaven's sake, Jay don't surprise us like that again without a warning.

Jay Benton Xmas Card An 8-Page Paper

This sleepy little hamlet of Belmont was suddenly awakened Wednesday morning after the mailmen had made their journey through here. They were leaving the first issue of the "Jay R. Benton's Christmas Annual and Fireside Companion". Not since the big wind of September 1938 has there been such comment and general conversation among the town-folks. A very novel idea, the popular former attorney-general made up an eight page newspaper with stories of and advertisements from his friends. He sent the newspaper to them as a Christmas card and were they all surprised.

JAY R. BENTON

Charlie Merrow Receives "Bomb" From J. Benton

To the Editor:

On Wednesday just before closing time the letter carrier innocently presented me with a bomb. The purpose of this bomb was undoubtedly to make old friends explode with laughter. This mission was thoroughly accomplished and I can't help but think that in this world of hustle and bustle maybe something like this is an antidote for many of our difficulties and problems that seem so important to us now.

Jay R. Benton's Xmas Annual & Fireside Companion is by far the funniest thing I have read for a long time. Perhaps the reason it is so funny to me is that it pans the folks I know.

The Stevens' General Store Advertisement gives us new ideas in retail merchandising and stock brokers will get a new slant on things by reading Herbert Rogers advertisement.

More power to you, Jay, and if everyone gets as big a kick out of your paper as I did, you can feel sure that you have done some real good and that we will all be impatiently waiting for the next edition of "Jay R. Benton's Xmas Annual & Fireside Companion."

WAR ON OUR SHORES

Herald Tribune—Acme

The Wreck of the Graf Spee

After the spectacular fight against three British ships off Montevideo and her subsequent scuttling on orders from Hitler, the crack German battleship Admiral Graf Spee is shown burning off Montevideo. At right, a closeup of the ship's plate after the battle in which she was forced to run into the harbor.

Herald Tribune—Acme Radio

Resting on the muddy bottom of the River Plate estuary, the Graf Spee sent up dense clouds of smoke for many hours after she had been destroyed by her own crew on orders from Berlin. The rescued sailors were interned in Argentina, and the suicide of the captain marked the final act of the drama.

Three dramatic events at sea last week brought home the nearness of the war to the Americas and raised the question of whether the American nations would implement their declaration of a neutral zone reaching 300 miles from their shores.

The Graf Spee. Outside Montevideo harbor, as the sun was setting last Sunday over South America, a man stood up in a launch and pressed a button. Over a cable to a fuse went the electrical impulse that converted the Admiral Graf Spee, one of Germany's three fast, powerfully armed pocket battleships, into a blazing wreck that soon sank into a soft mud bottom. The scuttler was Hans Langsdorff, captain of the ship. Defeated in battle by three smaller British warships—from which heavy toll in lives and damage had been taken—the captain obeyed Berlin's orders to destroy the ship rather than risk its capture. Three days later, part of his surviving crew in Uruguayan hospitals and prison cells, part interned in near-by Argentina, Captain Langsdorff killed himself.

WAR AT SEA

The hulk of the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee burning off Montevideo after Berlin had ordered it sunk by its crew to avoid a second battle with British cruisers.

Here is a Nazi sea raider's own story—in exclusive pictures made by her crew—of three and a half months of warfare in the South Atlantic—before her own death off Montevideo. Above: The British steamer Doric Star explodes under the guns of the raider.

Torpedo warfare was one of the weapons used by the pocket battleship in her attacks on British shipping. Blasted from an undersea shell from the Admiral Graf Spee, the merchant vessel Ashlea is shown at the moment of explosion.

Flames of War:

The drama and destruction of the war touched the shores of the New World last week with the burning of the 32,581-ton German ship Columbus 450 miles east of Delaware Bay. The flaming ship is shown above as pictured from the rescuing U. S. cruiser Tuscaloosa and, right, as the crew pulled away after her captain ordered the ship scuttled rather than face capture.

Liner Scuttled

The Columbus. Possibly in the belief that the Admiral Graf Spee's presence in Montevideo had diverted a large part of the Allied fleet to South American waters, the big German passenger liner Columbus left her sanctuary in Mexico for an attempt to emulate the Bremen's run for home. This time British vigilance was effective. A few hundred miles off the Virginia coast a destroyer fired a shot across the Columbus's bows. Prepared for that emergency, the crew took to lifeboats, while flames spread quickly through the ship that once were paced by happy tourists. The United States cruiser Tuscaloosa picked up all but two of the Columbus's complement of 579 and brought them safely to New York.

The German liner Columbus slowly sinks after she had been fired by her crew to escape the British 400 miles at sea off the American coast.

From the deck of the rescue ship Tuscaloosa, a lifeboat is seen approaching from the Columbus.

Back in England after battling the German pocket battleship Graf Spee in the South Atlantic, the men of the British cruiser Exeter hear Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, laud their valor. In the battle sixty-eight of the Exeter crew were killed and five of her six eight-inch guns disabled.

Scanning the Weather

Just one narrow cloud hung parallel to the eastern horizon before and at sunrise. It took on a salmon tinge when struck by the first solar rays, soon turned to crimson, then became blood red. The morning was warm as one in mid-April should be. The 7.30 mercury reading in Boston was 40 degrees. Highest temperature yesterday was 46, the Sabbath day averaging 10 above normal. The length of the day is now within a minute and some seconds of being the shortest of the year. The first gain of a minute from the minimum will come on Dec. 27.

Large Christmas card for Frances.

Back to the office at 3. John was coming over to help me out in my shopping but did not make it. Too busy. Left for home at 4.30

Frances met me at the Square - to home - and night to bed. Read the mail - a lot about the "annual."

John brought up my dinner - Cherry-stone clams. Beef Compote with macaroni - french fried onions. String Beans. Toast. Carrot Custard. Was going to the Boxing Bouts at the Boston Garden with Messrs Mansfield and Moody - and the boys from the Dorchester office - dinner at the Lucerne first - but too tired. Must rest up in bed. Sent Mother a Christmas Check today to her at Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

Scanning the Weather

The moon, at its first quarter, was in conjunction with and quite close to the planet Mars last night, but fleeting clouds gave little chance for a good view of the occurrence. Mars and Jupiter appear now very near each other in the southwestern sky before midnight and the moon, seen further east each evening, will be in conjunction with and very close to Jupiter tonight. Also it will seem to pass Saturn, the third of the planetary triumvirate in line high in the sky, on Dec. 21 and the more distant Uranus on Dec. 22. Boston temperature dropped to 32 degrees last night, from Monday's high mark of 48. The day averaged 10 degrees too warm for the Christmas season, being more appropriate to the first week in April. The mercury stood at 35 at 7.30 today, with high clouds covering most of the sky.

Mr. Cooper was War Minister for one and a half years during the vital period when Britain launched her gigantic rearmament program and acclaimed as one of Parliament's brilliant speakers. Few statesmen can discuss with greater authority Great Britain's role, present and future, in the current struggle between totalitarianism and democracy for domination of world affairs.

The guest charge is $7.50 and you are welcome to have one at that figure and as many more as you want at $10.00 each.

STORM CAUSES MANY MISHAPS

Planes Grounded, Buses Delayed by Ice

Yesterday's summer-like rainstorm, with fog and southwest winds resulted in the temporary grounding of planes, hampering shipping and causing scores of automobiles accidents.

Although yesterday's fog lifted sufficiently by night to allow the resumption of Boston-New York plane service, ships were obliged to proceed cautiously as fog continued thick.

After apparently dragging her anchor, the Ramona, a 40-foot vessel, went aground on an island in New Bedford harbor.

In several parts of northern New England yesterday and last night rain that fell froze and formed an icy coating over highways.

Scanning the Weather

The light rain, with fog accompaniment, of yesterday forenoon, developed into a deluge which flooded streets and jammed traffic to an alarming extent late in the day. Nearly an inch of rain fell, most of it in a brief but fierce shower. That amount raised the precipitation above the average for the first 20 days of December and caused no end of discomfort to many thousands of Christmas shoppers. The storm came out of the south, attended by a rise in temperature to an extreme of 57 degrees. When the "clearing-up" shower had passed the mercury dropped very fast, about 20 degrees. Lowest was 36 and the reading at 7.30 A.M. was 37. On Mt. Washington, in a snowstorm, the wind reached a peak velocity of 112 miles an hour.

Dear "J.O."

The "Knockers" Club held its 46th Annual Christmas luncheon at the Parker House this noon. The first thought that came to everybody was the wish that you were back again at the head of the table. And before any thing else was done, the menu was passed around for all to sign and send to you. Here it is! And may I assure you that with each signature goes the sincerest affection that is possible for a group of gentlemen to send to a gentleman. We think of you often, but upon no occasion with deeper feeling as upon Christmas time. As always the Knockers Club is young and old, but regardless of the passage of the years, the old truth remains -- that no matter what may come, the choicest value a man can tie to is friendship. This you had today at our table.

Accept, if you please, from all the members, our deep esteem, affection, and respect.

Respectfully,

Holiday Snow On Way Here

Prospects of a "white Christmas" were extended by the weatherman today through a storm sweeping from Texas.

A light fall—but enough to try out Christmas sleds—was predicted for New England late tomorrow or on Christmas day.

Fair and continued cold weather was forecast for tonight, with the snow, or possibly rain, to soon follow.

Through the early part of the clear cold night the moon, nearly full, was lined up to the east of the three planets, Saturn, Jupiter and Mars, adding luster to the feature celestial display so prominent in the last two months. Jupiter and Mars are now very close companions. Venus, brightest of all, was seen for about two hours after sunset, low in the southwest. Brisk, cold winds prevailed through the night. Boston temperature, 23 degrees at 7.30 this morning, was at a 24-hour minimum, while the maximum yesterday was 32. Weather Bureau reports indicated the possibility of snow late tomorrow. Clouds hung over Mt. Washington, where temperature was 9 below zero and where greatest wind velocity was 120 miles an hour.

THE STORY OF Christmas

As Recorded in Matthew 2:1-12

Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is He that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen His star in the east, and are come to worship Him. When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born. And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judaea... Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, enquired of them diligently what time the star appeared. And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young Child; and when ye have found Him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship Him also. When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young Child was. When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy. And when they were come into the house, they saw the young Child with Mary His mother, and fell down, and worshipped Him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto Him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh. And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way.

A Christmas Carol, inscribed by Dickens on its day of publication

The writer who has given the world so much Christmas joy in his renowned Carol, was born three years after Abraham Lincoln, and indeed won his way to the hearts of countless millions through a sympathy with the humble which he shared with his great American contemporary.

It was on February 7, 1812, that CHARLES JOHN HUFFAM DICKENS, son of a clerk in the navy-pay office, first saw the light of day in a house in Mile End Terrace, Commercial Road, Landport, a division of Portsea. Early tastes of hardship were the result of his family's impecunious condition. The first important step in his literary career was taken when at 19 he "entered the gallery" as parliamentary reporter to the True Sun.

By the time Dickens reached 31, many of his famous works had been written, such as Oliver Twist, Pickwick Papers, Old Curiosity Shop and others. Toward the end of 1843, being hard pressed with debts, Dickens undertook the Carol, which he sandwiched in between instalments of Martin Chuzzlewit, then appearing serially.

It was published shortly before Christmas and sold rapidly. Six thousand copies were disposed of the first day and within one year A Christmas Carol, that national benefit, as Thackeray called it, had gone through twenty-four editions. On his reading tours in America, the Carol was Dickens' as well as his audiences' favorite. Today editions exist in almost every language, including Gaelic, Russian, Chinese and Japanese. A translation has also been prepared in Esperanto.

IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS?

(This editorial, now famous, appeared sometime ago in The Sun, in answer to a "Dear Editor" inquiry from a little girl.)

WE TAKE PLEASURE in answering at once and thus prominently the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of THE SUN

Dear Editor, - I am eight years old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says: "If you see it in THE SUN, it's so." Please tell me the truth; is there a Santa Claus?

Virginia O'Hanlon

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the scepticism of a sceptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds.

All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to our life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance, to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign there is no Santa Claus.

The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God! he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

Home for Christmas by Dale Nichols

★ 1909 ★

Thirty years ago at Christmas time, from Park Street Church almost to Beacon Street, peddlers lined the curb howling their wares. Tin monkeys climbing ropes, mice that could actually crawl, jiggling tin beetles, tin cars, a countless variety of jumping toys—these and myriad other things were for sale. The joviality and gay Christmas spirit of the “Fakers’ Row” have long since faded into memory and legend.

In 1842 a Yule Card; Today a Billion

FIRST CHRISTMAS CARD—1842 design, which Mrs. Octavia W. Goodbar believes the first of its type

Mrs. Octavia Goodbar, Authority on the Season's Greetings, Thinks English Lad Started Idea That Has Become a Huge Industry

Mrs. Octavia Walton Goodbar, an authority on the history and social significance of Christmas cards, emerged from behind a stack of them in her office at 36 West Forty-fourth Street yesterday and revealed some curious facts about a custom that started in England less than a century ago and spread through the Christian world.

By tomorrow night, Mrs. Goodbar estimates, every man, woman and child in the United States will have opened an average of twelve cards each. Nine out of ten of the pasteboards will contain the message "A Merry Christmas" or "A Happy Christmas," with or without verse, and the designs on most of them will adhere to the traditional, or mistletoe - poinsettia - plum pudding school.

Custom Started in 1860's

Contrary to popular belief, the practice of spreading the good-will-toward-men sentiment via greeting cards did not become general until the 1860's. Christmas itself, for that matter, was not a legal holiday in New York until 1892. By that time most of the other states had sanctioned Christmas, although New Mexico did not get around to it until 1915.

Authorities differ on the authorship of the first Christmas card Mrs. Goodbar believes that the first card was drawn and etched in 1842 by W. M. Egley, an English lad of sixteen. This card showed several scenes suggestive of the holiday season: a Christmas party, skating, carol singers, distribution of soup, a Punch and Judy show and two figures dancing the Roger de Coverley. The message ran: "A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to You," with space for the sender's name.

Four years later the Christmas card had its first public sale. Sir Henry Cole, the first director of the South Kensington Museum, London, commissioned J. C. Horsley to design a card for him. It was lithographed and colored by hand and 1,000 copies were printed. The card was executed in the ornate Germanesque style, a design of rustic trellis work in three panels, the central panel occupied by a jovial family group in the act of drinking wine, and the two side panels depicting two acts of charity, "feeding the hungry" and "clothing the naked." It pleased every one except the temperance workers, who objected to the wine.

Became a Habit

After 1860 the use of Christmas cards rapidly became a habit in England. Artists of established reputation were pressed into service, and in 1882 one firm alone paid $35,000 to artists for original designs.

Meanwhile the custom had crossed the seas. Mrs. Goodbar thinks that the first cards manufactured in the United States were made in Roxbury, Mass., in 1874 by Louis Prang, a German printer exiled from his homeland after the abortive revolution of 1848. Mr. Prang shipped his first output to England, but in 1875 he undertook their sale in the domestic market. That was the beginning of the Christmas card industry in the United States. It was not, however, until about 1906 that greeting cards became as indispensable to Christmas as carols and fir trees.

Today the sale of Christmas cards runs well over 1,000,000,000 a year, according to Mrs. Goodbar. New York State is the biggest market, with Massachusetts second. Then come Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio, the Pacific Coast, Michigan, Missouri and New Jersey in the order named.

$15 for Her First Card

Mrs. Goodbar has been interested in Christmas cards since she was a small girl in her home town of Falmouth Foreside, Me. She had won a school prize for drawing, and a wealthy woman who saw the design paid her $15 for some Christmas drawings of a dog. She entered the greeting-card business in 1916, and today her headquarters adjoins the offices of her husband, Dr. Joseph E. Goodbar, lawyer and economist, president of the Society for the Stability of Money and Banking.

She has designed hundreds of original cards, not only Christmas greetings, but also birthday cards, sympathy cards, friendship cards, congratulatory cards and cards to cheer convalescents. Often she writes her own verses, but sometimes she buys the poetry. Invariably these verses come from the rural areas, and Mrs. Goodbar pays $5 each for them. They are seldom longer than four lines.

Mrs. Goodbar says that the trend in Christmas cards is back to religious themes. She feels that the cards are setting "a new and higher standard in the art of maintaining friendly contacts with our fellows."

War's Influence Felt

Publishers attribute the increase in sales of this type of card to a religious revival brought about by the war.

Although European Christmas cards have taken a decided turn toward joking about war, peace has been the theme of many person's Christmas selections in America this year, and cards showing angels and bearing mottos such as "Peace, Good Will to Men" . . . have been offered in all price ranges.

Cards bearing photographic likenesses of the sender, his family, or perhaps his home, were also popular this season, and retailers admit that the photographic Christmas cards, which were a novelty two years ago, have now found a definite place in the Christmas card market. One type of card is rapidly disappearing, however. Sales have fallen off sharply in most quarters on "gag" cards, which were popular for several years.

ONCE AGAIN . . IT'S TIME TO MAKE A BOWL OF

Merry Christmas!

If Four Roses Eggnog has become a holiday tradition in your home . . . as it has in so many . . . you probably know this recipe by heart. But just to make sure, here it is again. Get yourself some Four Roses Whiskey at your nearest package store—then follow these directions faithfully:

Beat separately the yolks and whites of 6 fresh eggs. Add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup of sugar to yolks, while beating, and $\frac{1}{4}$ cup of sugar to whites after they have been beaten very stiff. Mix egg whites with yolks. Stir in 1 pint of rich cream and 1 pint of milk. Add 1 pint of Four Roses (or more, to taste), and 1 ounce of Jamaica Rum. Stir thoroughly. Serve very cold with grated nutmeg on each cup. (This recipe makes 5 pints of Eggnog.)

Dear Mother:

We had a rollicking Christmas yesterday. Hannah, Collins, and Joan were in, as were Josiah and Eleanor, the last two to the Roast Goose Dinner, together with the Jamesons. Had a telephone talk with Blanche at Pittsfield. In touch with Guildhall by David's short-wave radio.

Glad you liked the Christmas Annual. Have received several hundred letters on it so far. Thanks much for your Christmas Present -- the bedroom leather slippers -- I tried them on this morning -- they fit nicely and look finely.

Best Wishes For The New Year of 1940.

Affectionately,
Your Son,

Your kind thought and act were one of the happiest episodes in a happy holiday at the Benton home. Thank you very much.

Dear Betty and Hugh:

The enlargement you sent is a corker. Frances says that it is the best picture she has seen of me in years, and she is the best judge I know of. Thanks for having it done and sending it along.

I tried out the foto-flash camera at the Christmas Hi-jinks at our house yesterday -- got the developed pictures tomorrow evening.

Happy New Year!

Hub to Shiver Another Day

Boston will continue to shiver, at least until tomorrow, the weatherman said today as a 17-mile wind and a low humidity of 27 gave a dry bite to an 18-degree official temperature.

Cold blasts from the west-northwest will continue through tomorrow, with clear skies, he said.

Throughout other parts of the country it is reported cloudy. Moderate snows fell over New York state and northern Vermont, but no snow is in sight for Boston yet.

Excellent skating on countless inland waters featured Christmas day to the delight of young America, in New England. Ponds were covered with glassy ice and cold winds held it in perfect condition all day. The full moon lighted the ponds at night for thousands who, on ringing steel, rounded out the festivities of the holiday. No fall of snow was reported in any part of New England, though snow generally had been predicted in time to provide a white Christmas. Boston temperature remained below 30 degrees all of Monday. Highest was 29.5, from which point it dropped to 18.4 at 7.30 this morning, the minimum for 24 hours. Mt. Washington sent down a low quotation of 14 below zero and reported west wind at 90 miles an hour.

MODEL

A NEW EASTMAN-MADE, MODERATELY PRICED PROJECTOR
FOR THE SHOWING OF 16 mm. MOVIES AT THEIR BEST

KODASCOPE OFFERS...

... the qualities most appreciated by business men, educators, professional men, and movie-making enthusiasts:—simplicity, trouble-free operation, versatility, efficiency, and the dignity of appearance which comes from a fundamentally correct design.

Because its control system has been thoroughly simplified, an inexperienced operator can obtain expert results with Kodascope G from the beginning. Film threading has been facilitated by mechanical improvements, plus a pilot light which eliminates groping and fumbling.

Because the "G" is precision-built, it can be relied on for long life with a minimum of adjustment.

Because it can be fitted with any of five lenses—from a 1-inch wide angle lens for short throws to a 4-inch lens for auditorium work—and three lamps, the “G” can be adapted to meet any 16 mm. projection condition.

Because it is designed right, it looks right. Finished in a combination of black crinkled and lustrous, smooth, hand-rubbed lacquer, Kodascope G is a handsome instrument.

And its price is less than serious movie users have hitherto expected to pay for comparable equipment. The exact price depends on the lenses, lamps, and accessories required. A typical combination—the “G” with 2-inch, f.1.6 lens and 500-watt lamp—is priced at $123.45.

Complete prices and significant details are given elsewhere in this folder.

THIS IS Kodascope MODEL G

THERE is only one way to appreciate the "G." See it, use it, get the "feel" of it. If you are interested in mechanical design, Kodascope G will delight you. If your primary concern is bother-free efficiency, you'll discover that the "G" was made for you.

Here, specifically, are a few of the features which make this projector unique:

FINGERTIP CONTROL. A single, four-position switch gives control over four major functions. At OFF, current is entirely shut off. At THREAD LIGHT, a small hooded light alongside the lens-mount goes on and illuminates both sprockets and the film gate. At MOTOR, the projection mechanism is started, with the threading light remaining on so that a check-up on film movement may easily be made. Finally, at LAMP, the projection light is turned on, the threading light goes off—and the show is on. During rewinding, the thread light is switched on, the projection lamp off.

SIMPLIFIED THREADING. To clear the film gate for free access of the film, it is only necessary to turn the Threading Knob so that its notch, as easy to feel as to see, is at the left. The hinged sprocket clamps are opened easily for the insertion of the film and, after the film is "seated," clamp down firmly. With the threading light on, the few motions needed to place the film in upper sprocket, film gate, lower sprocket, and take-up reel are easily, quickly made.

"STILL" ADJUSTMENT. To enjoy any one frame of the movies, lantern slide fashion, flip the lever below the threading knob to the "still" position—and there's your picture. A safety screen, automatically dropped between lamp and film, protects the film from excessive heat.

REVERSE PROJECTION. Snap the direction switch, atop the projector, to REVERSE, and backward projection of the movies begins at once.

VARIABLE SPEED. Standard speed is 16 frames per second (when a dot on the upper sprocket makes two revolutions per second, the projector is working at standard speed) but faster or slower speed can be obtained by a turn of the speed regulator, just above the four-way control switch.

TAILOR-MADE PROJECTION. The five lenses available for Kodascope G are: 1-inch f.2.5, 2-inch f.2.5, 2-inch f.1.6, 3-inch f.2.0, and the 4-inch f.2.5. In conjunction with the 400-, 500-, and 750-watt lamps, fifteen combinations are possible. To determine the combination you need, it is necessary only to establish the desired size of the projected image, the length of the "throw," and the type of screen surface to be used. A partial tabulation is given on the back of this folder. Complete data are readily available.

PLUS. Among the other features of Kodascope G: cool, quiet operation . . . high speed rewind . . . positive leveling or tilting (a one-hand operation) . . . convenience. (For example, the "G" is designed to fit securely atop its carrying case for impromptu set-ups) . . . projection lamp may be cut off during rewind . . . prelubricated bearings; only three oiling points, requiring infrequent attention . . . accurate, positive control of focus and framing . . . easy access to lamp, condenser lens, film gate, and projection lens. Kodascope G operates on either D.C. or 25- to 60-cycle A.C., 100- to 125-volt lines.

Ben Franklin at Mayor's Desk

Revisiting Boston today—he was born where the Transcript building now stands—Benjamin Franklin, in buckled shoes, knee breeches, cape and three-cornered hat dropped in on Mayor Tobin to invite him to the University of Pennsylvania's Mask and Wig show at the Boston Opera House tomorrow night. Ben, impersonated by Malcolm M. Bowen of Boston, is signing the visitors' book, with the mayor (left) and George K. Manson, president of the Franklin Foundation (right), looking on.

'Ben Franklin' Here, Revisits Scene of Birth

Today's most notable visitor to Boston was none other than Ben Franklin, himself, whose pilgrimage included a visit to the Transcript Building, which marks the site where he was born in 1706.

"Here it is, Ben; this is the place where you first saw light," explained George K. Manson, president of Boston's Franklin Union, and one of Franklin's hosts. He pointed to the bronze plate on the building at 17 Milk street, and Ben—holding a copy of the Transcript under his arm—read with interest the tablet commemorating his own advent into the world.

Earlier in the morning, Ben—personified by Malcolm M. Bowen, University of Pennsylvania graduate and Boston insurance man—visited Mayor Tobin at City Hall, where he was introduced by James C. Irwin, local railroad official and University of Pennsylvania grad, class of 1890.

The occasion for these doings was the arrival, today, of the University of Pennsylvania's Mask and Wig Club, here for the first time since 1896 to renew its tradition of playing in Boston once a year. At the Boston Opera House, tomorrow night, it will offer its 52d Mask and Wig production, "Great Guns, a Saga of the Sagebrush."

"I would voice my satisfaction at being so well remembered in Boston," Franklin said to the mayor, "especially by that corporation which cares so well for the moneys I put out at interest many years ago to create the Franklin Foundation, of which your honor is a trustee."

Ben then gave His Honor an invitation to attend Thursday night's performance of "Great Guns."

WED., DEC. 27, 1939

"BEN" PROMOTES PLAY—Dressed as Ben Franklin, Malcolm Bowen, Boston insurance man and University of Pennsylvania graduate, paid a visit to Mayor Tobin today to tell him about the Mask and Wig Club, of the U. of P. play, "Great Guns: A Saga of the Sagebrush," which will be presented tomorrow evening at the Boston Opera House.

COLDEST DAY

Scanning the Weather

"When the days begin to lengthen, then the cold begins to strengthen" is the way an old New England jingle runs. And so, with Dec. 27 marking an increase of two minutes in the period between sunrise and sunset, Old Man Zero paid a visit to the Northeastern States, even reaching the environs of Boston. Officially a minimum of 6.1 degrees was reached here at 7.30 A.M., which was practically 10 below the lowest previous mark this month and seven below the lowest in December 1938. Various neighboring localities sent in figures as low as 5 below zero. Highest temperature yesterday was 23 degrees and the day's average was 14 below the seasonal figure. It was solid, cold winter weather. Temperature mount-

The Merry-Go-Round

Scanning the Weather

Snow, predicted freely since Christmas Eve, has failed to materialize in this vicinity, though much has fallen throughout the West and in many other localities. The threatening clouds of yesterday dwindled to a haze through which stars shone faintly early last night. By midnight even the haze was gone and moon, stars and planets lighted the early morning hours. Temperatures for Dec. 27 averaged 18 degrees below normal. The lowest in the last 24 hours, however, has been a little higher and the 7.30 A.M. reading today for Boston was about eight degrees above the showing at the same time on Wednesday. Highest yesterday was 17. Lowest last night was 10.3. With figures for four days remaining to be considered, 1939 has had the lowest precipitation, with a single exception, since 1846, according to Boston records.

'Benjamin Franklin' Returns to Boston

Benjamin Franklin, local boy who left Boston more than 200 years ago to make good in the then distant city of Philadelphia, returned here yesterday in the costumed figure of Malcolm M. Bowen, Boston insurance man and graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, to herald the presentation tonight at 8:20 P. M. at the Boston Opera House of Pennsylvania's 52d annual Mask and Wig production, "Great Guns."

The modern Franklin visited City Hall, where he was introduced to Mayor Tobin by George Manson, president of the Franklin Foundation. The returning "native son" extended to the mayor an invitation to tonight's performance and, in turn, received the mayor's invitation to visit the Franklin birthplace at Washington and Milk streets.

GREAT GUNS

THE MASK AND WIG CLUB of the University of Pennsylvania will greet a new generation when its members arrive in Boston on December 28th with their 52nd annual production GREAT GUNS. Not since 1896 has Boston had a look at a Mask and Wig show.

The "Wiggers" have set GREAT GUNS on a dude ranch in our own west, but the gun battles are not noisy and are a doggone sight funnier than those elsewhere. The chief battle, in fact, will be one of music, with Clay Boland's "Midnight on the Trail", "Stop! It's Wonderful" and "I've Got My Eye on You" vying for top honors.

GREAT GUNS is a double-barreled show with a company of sixty song and dance punchers including the famous Mask and Wig dancing chorus. The Club is embarking this year on the longest tour in its history, three thousand miles with performances in twenty cities.

Free parking facilities opposite the Opera House will be available to guests of the Mask and Wig Club.

A SAGA OF THE SAGEBRUSH

ROBERT F. DAWSON of Boston, plays the leading role in the University of Pennsylvania Mask and Wig Club show, "Great Guns," which will be presented at the Boston Opera House next Thursday evening.

A PROFESSIONAL makeup man gets the "Maskers" ready for their rootin'-tootin', two-gun shootin' thriller.

DAWSON, as "Lone Ed Buckley," sings "When I Climb Down from My Saddle" to the heroine, "Polly Whitehead," known to "her" fellow students as Hugh W. Close, Jr. This is the first time in 43 years that a Mask and Wig Club production has played in Boston.

Scanning the Weather

Four days of solid wintry cold have reduced the excess temperature of this month to 31 degrees. Four more such days would more than cancel that surplus. Highest temperature yesterday was 32 degrees. The lowest since midnight was 22, at 7.30 A.M. Silvery clouds tinted with cream hid the rising sun and, an hour later, the silvery sheen was in perfect mackerel sky formation. Weather vanes gradually turned from northwest to west, then to west-southwest, giving indication of rising temperature. The year's precipitation to date hangs at an even 31 inches, which is 9.14 below the 50-year average, while the precipitation for the very wet 1938 was 10.30 inches above.

Boston's temperature was down to 14 degrees, within a single niche of that month's lowest, at sunrise on Dec. 29, 1938. Then wind became southerly and there was a steady rise to 32 at midnight, but the day averaged seven below the norm. Humidity percentage in the atmosphere was very low at noon but increased rapidly thereafter and light snow was falling before midnight. The day's sunshine percentage was 58.

C.H.B.

Heavy Snowstorm

Snow, yes. real snow, often predicted of late, but failing to materialize, sneaked in from off the ocean and began to fall on Boston and adjacent territory at 12.55 A.M. Silently, and accumulating rapidly, it covered lands, trees and housetops. Early risers rubbed their eyes in wonderment as they looked upon a whitened world, which last they had seen as bare and brown. By 7.30 this morning the precipitation had reached nearly half an inch. There was a brief lull, then, after which the snowfall was resumed with increasing vigor. Early precipitation was heaviest along the coast but the storm slowly worked inland. Early indications were that there might be enough rain or snow, or both before the end of the month to bring the December precipitation to normal, but not enough to prevent 1939 going into the records, as the driest year, with a single exception, since 1846. The temperatures for December as a whole and for the year 1939, will average a fraction of a degree above normal.

PICTURES OF THE YEAR

Here are some of the most striking news pictures of 1939. Selected for pictorial quality, they also mirror great events.

1939 Reviewed in ROTO

THE DRAMA OF THE SQUALUS. Undersea history of a new sort was made last May when 33 members of the crew of the sunken submarine were rescued from a depth of 240 feet in the waters off the New Hampshire coast. That the survivors did not share the fate of 26 drowned shipmates was the result, in part, of the first practical application of the newly invented rescue bell or chamber, which is shown above beside the salvage vessel Falcon, as one of the first seven cold and weary survivors reached the surface.

Probably no year in history has surpassed the passing twelve months in significance. In peace and war, winged transportation set new standards, and the twenty-first anniversary of the armistice, which was to have brought an end to all war, saw the end of the armed truce in Europe as hostilities were resumed by a militarized and powerful Germany against Great Britain and France as allies. 1939 also saw the extinction of Czecho-Slovakia and Albania as nations and the fourth partitioning of Poland. The appearance of the Red Army of Russia as a menace to the little democracies gained added significance with the invasion of Finland. Meanwhile the future looks to 1940.

WAR IN THE AIR

This photograph of the Firth of Forth, showing British warships lying at anchor, was made by a German expert in one of the numerous air raids on British naval bases.

THE DEATH OF POLAND. Beneath the statue of a Polish hero in Warsaw are the rifles and ammunition surrendered by the 100,000 weary defenders of the capital after a 20-day siege that saw the city on the Vistula bombed and burned.

WAR ON LAND

Symbolic of Poland's brave but ineffectual efforts against German might is this photo of a village fire department trying to combat flames set by high explosives.

THE YANKEE CLIPPER, which last March blazed the trail for the first regularly scheduled flights over the Atlantic.

WORLD SORROW

The year became notable in the annals of the Roman Catholic Church as the end of one pontificate and the beginning of another. Above, the body of Pope Pius XI, 261st Vicar of Christ on Earth, is seen lying in state in the Vatican as the world paid its tribute.

DISASTER The sinking of the United States submarine Squalus was the first of a series of three peace-time submarine disasters in which British and French craft also were lost. The photograph shows the bow of the Squalus breaking water in the course of the prolonged salvage efforts.

SPECTACLE

The New York World's Fair, setting a new, scale in size and lavishness for undertakings of its kind, drew millions of visitors to the Flushing Meadows. The night view above shows a part of the fountains and pools of Constitution Mall, looking toward the Federal Building.

SOUTH AMERICA'S EARTHQUAKE. Dazed inhabitants of Chillan are shown after the major quake which struck a 50,000-square-mile sector of Southern Chile on January 24. More than 30,000 lives were lost.

THE END OF SPAIN'S CIVIL WAR. Spanish marines passing the triumphal columns during the victory parade staged on May 19 to celebrate the termination of the 32-month struggle.

BRITISH MON-ARCH visits the United States. King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain are shown at Niagara Falls, N. Y., as they were welcomed on June 7 with simple informality to the United States by Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull.

A BRITISH KING VISITS THE UNITED STATES. King George and President Roosevelt riding to the White House in the royal party's reception in Washington.

CITY OF FLINT, recently freed in Norway after 26 days of captivity under a German prize crew, is shown upon arriving at Halifax on September 13 with some of the survivors of the Athenia, the first sea tragedy of the European war.

YEAR 1939 SAW

By WILLIAM ALCOTT
Librarian, the Boston Globe

The non-aggression pact signed by Germany and Russia on Aug. 21, 1939, produced wars which involved nations with a population of 870,000,000. Already the undeclared war of Japan and China, now in its third year, involved another 500,000,000. At the end of the year of 1939, therefore, more than two-thirds of all the inhabitants on the face of the earth were at war. Efforts toward peace made by heads of several Governments apparently failed completely, but Hitler offered peace on the basis of his conquests.

The Spanish Civil War ended with victory for the Fascist Gen. Franco. Meanwhile, almost without bloodshed, Italy absorbed Albania. The destruction of shipping—merchantmen and warcraft, hostile and neutral—by mine and submarine or from the air, was enormous. Hitler narrowly escaped assassination. The League of Nations expelled Russia from membership.

* * *

In the United States, President Roosevelt was able through one death and one resignation to appoint two members to the Supreme Court. A special session of Congress repealed the embargo clause of the Neutrality act. The King and Queen of England were entertained by the President and visited the New York World's Fair. The President named a representative to the Vatican.

Two world's fairs were opened with a total attendance of 43,000,000, but both closed in the red. The country observed two Thanksgiving Days. Regular Transatlantic Clipper air service was inaugurated. California and Ohio rejected radical pension plans. England's Magna Charta was deposited in Library of Congress for safe keeping.

The world was shaken by two destructive earthquakes. Over 25,000 lives were lost in Chile, and many more last week in the earthquake in Turkey.

Disaster overtook the submarine Squalus off Portsmouth and 26 lives were lost, yet with invention of an American naval officer, now used in its first emergency, the rescue chamber saved the lives of 38. A streamlined western train was derailed with 16 killed and 113 injured. New England suffered a drought of 28 days. The Pacific Coast experienced its severest heat wave.

* * *

Labor's warring factions were unable to come to agreement. Among the many strikes in all parts of the country a new type appeared—the slow-down strike in the Chrysler automobile factory. The Supreme Court denounced the sit-down strike, and upheld the constitutionality of T. V. A. and the right to distribute handbills. Sixteen thousand W. P. A. workers were discharged for striking against the Government. The Wage-Hour act became effective, with shorter hours and increased pay.

* * *

To succeed Pope Pius who died early in the year, Cardinal Pacelli, familiar with American interests, was elected his successor, and took the title of Pius XII. Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago died. Other notable deaths included the two Mayo brothers and Harvey Cushing, among the greatest of American surgeons; Charles M. Schwab, industrialist; Claude A. Swanson, Secretary of the Navy, and Douglas Fairbanks.

Main Currents of the Year

The year 1939 was a year of blackout, a blackout of the hopes for a peaceful world fostered in the two decades since the Treaty of Versailles. Europe was again at war in a test of strength between rival empires and rival ways of life. Across the affairs of men far removed from the battlegrounds fell the shadow of a conflict that was consuming the old order and shaping that yet to come.

The rise of Great Germany from the ashes of Versailles, a Germany more aggressive and imperialistic than that of the Hohenzollerns, challenged a united Britain and France for the second time in a quarter century. The glove was cast by a totalitarian State that had just found friendship, possible partnership, with a former foe, the Soviet Union.

In the United States the impact of war thrust foreign policy to the fore; domestic policies of reform and recovery took second place. Politics, as the parties looked toward the 1940 elections, felt the shift of emphasis, and in 1940 as in 1916 a European war loomed as a possible campaign issue.

ABROAD

CHALLENGE

From Baireuth on an August night last Summer the radio brought the strains of "Goetterdaemmerung"—the Twilight of the Gods—and at that moment Europe was rushing toward the catastrophe men had striven for twenty years to avert. The Europe of Versailles, like the Valhalla of the gods, was about to go up in flames. The democratic world of Britain and France was to meet the test of arms with totalitarian Germany.

The test had been foreseen by the treaty-makers when they met in Paris after the World War. They sought to prevent it by redrawing the map in a fashion to keep Germany from ever again threatening continental domination and by creating a League of Nations as arbiter of the "New Europe." They failed, for out of the "New Europe" stemmed the Third Reich of Adolf Hitler, who made humbling of the Versailles system a fundamental purpose.

Militarization of the Reich and of the Rhineland, annexation of Austria and the Sudetenland—these were guideposts along the road of a resurgent Germany, Great Germany, strong and aggressive, imbued with the Nazi philosophy of force and exaltation of the State. The new Reich challenged the very foundations of the democratic powers, and the more because Germany and Italy made common cause of the "have-nots" against the "haves."

RESISTANCE

Expanding Germany threatened not only the free institutions of democracy. It menaced also the economic empires on which Britain and France rested. But the democracies, their peoples peace-loving, their governments conscious that beyond the Reich lay communism, conceded and "appeased" in hope that the Nazi appetite would not grow on what it fed, that once German-inhabited regions were part of the Reich, Hitler would be content. That hope died last March when the Germans reached out and added non-German Czecho-Slovakia to their realm; "appeasement" died with it. Henceforth any major advance of Hitler and his Reich would be met by force.

An aroused Britain and France looked to their arms against the day when Hitler—British Ambassador Henderson described him as "the corporal of the last war" who was "even more anxious to prove what he could do as a conquering generalissimo in the next"—should set his legions marching. Sept. 1 was the day. German troops and planes and tanks were loosed against the Polish Republic. The peace of Europe was blacked out, for then it was that Britain and France, ostensibly to aid Poland, took up the German challenge.

None entered upon this war "with a light heart," as had France her 1870 war with Prussia. War with a totalitarian State spelled totalitarian war for all involved, with regimentation of civilian and military life to a point that put in doubt whether the democracies would ever return to the same free ways they had cherished and which, in part, they were fighting to defend. Further doubt was cast by the return of Russia to the European arena.

NEW FRIENDS

On the eve of Germany's Polish adventure the Nazis made a pact with the Kremlin Communists, a move that had been hinted earlier, but had been steadily discounted because of the Third Reich's long avowed hatred of communism and all its works. What the new and strange friendship portended remained one of 1939's unanswered questions.

Militarily and economically the Soviet Union seemed likely to remain chiefly a mental hazard, unless with Germany she joined forces to divide the Balkans and Scandinavia even as the two countries early divided the Polish State. But the very fact of Russo-German harmony brought the Soviet Union's influence nearer to the capitalist democracies of the West and raised the bogey that, should the Reich be too hard pressed on the fighting fronts, Hitler, in whose mind self-destruction appeared to be preferable to defeat, would call in communism to bring down around him the European house.

That prospect remained distant while the war, a "phoney" war it seemed to some, though not to its victims, dragged out its course. Many prophets had maintained that a European war would be a "Blitzkrieg," a war fought with terrifying and immediate devastation on land, at sea and in the air. Writers had described waves of planes bombing cities and civilians out of existence, had told of gas that would snuff out living things, of motorized armies striking swiftly, mercilessly, and bringing the conflict to quick conclusion.

BLITZKRIEG

Such a war was German strategy against Poland. Twenty days sufficed to make the Polish Republic a memory, its gravestones the ruined cities and ravaged countryside over which the "Blitzkrieg" had rolled. But against the Anglo-French Allies no mass air attacks were launched. The French Maginot Line, facing the German Westwall, barred motorized German columns from the fields of Alsace and Champagne.

Hitler, all evidence indicated, was dismayed when the Allies stepped in his path. He substituted diplomacy at first for "Blitzkrieg" and offered peace—on his own terms—that would protect the "Lebensraum" he had carved from Poland and Czecho-Slovakia and Austria. Peace talk was calculated to stir defeatism among his foes. Actual peace would prevent strangulation by the blockade the Allies were tightening about the economically poor Germany of the Nazis. But peace talk fell on the wind, Prime Minister Chamberlain answering that "conditions cannot be acceptable which begin by condoning aggression." Nor did Italian prompting—Italy had stayed outside the war begun by her German partner—make the Allies more ready to lay down their arms.

Mounting vigil along the Maginot Line, driving away from the sea and land defenses the German planes that came as raiders, the Allies drew tighter and tighter their blockade, as Hitler had feared. German merchant ships almost vanished from the seas. Neutral trade with Germany languished as fewer and fewer of the raw materials needed by a nation at war reached the Nazis.

SEA POWER

A counter-blockade of submarine and mine, of surface raider and plane, failed to loose the stranglehold of the Allied navies. Nor did it halt the steady flow of supplies to Britain's island kingdom and to France. As in the last war the Allies were demonstrating that truth lay in Captain Mahan's classic theory of the influence of seapower on the world's history.

How long the Germans would rest behind their Westwall without striking military blows as a way out of the land stalemate and as a counterpoise to the Allied blockade was one of the war's uncertainties as 1939 drew to a close. No less uncertain was the question whether the war could be confined to the Allies and Germany.

UNCERTAINTIES

Russia's war upon Finland, now a month old and outside the main arena, threatened to draw Northern Europe into the general war; the Allies were sending aid to the Finns. Hints of German or Russian action in the Balkans were numerous, and action in that region, which Bismarck in a famous phrase once asserted was not worth the bones of a Pomeranian grenadier, could well bring on Mediterranean war. Turkey, tied to the Allies, and Italy, allied to Germany but opposed to Russia, both regarded the Balkans with anxious eyes and presumably would resist fundamental changes in the status quo. These uncertainties were compounded by uncertainty of conditions within the Soviet Union itself, especially since the Finnish war had damaged Russian military prestige.

Europe's war overshadowed the fact of war between Japan and China, now two years and a half old with decision still apparently distant. Overshadowed also was the precarious hold the small European neutrals had on peace. And only now and then did the world recall that in Europe's half-evacuated cities life did go on, men and women following so far as possible their regular paths. The Paris couturiers were an example. In the midst of war's alarms and dangers they were still designing and sewing, that style be not lost in a world turned upside down.

DEFENSE

Tonight bells heralding the New Year will ring through an America that knows the shadow of war but not the blackout of peace. For a twelve-month the country has dwelt within that shadow. To avoid the blackout has been national purpose. President Roosevelt voiced it last January when, in gray cutaway, he mounted the rostrum of the House of Representatives to report on the state of the Union. He reiterated that aim when Europe's thunderclouds brought storm. Defense—against attack and against the likelihood of American involvement in European conflict—has been the keynote of the year.

The Administration, while Congress was shaping the greatest peacetime arms program in American history, sought to halt the rising tide of Europe's war danger. An appeal to the dictators for peace and the status quo failed. Failure also greeted the President's initial plea to Congress to lift from the Neutrality Act the arms embargo to belligerents, Congressmen refusing to be impressed with the argument that aggressors might well think twice if they knew in advance that Britain and France, who in war would control the seas, could draw on the United States as an arms reservoir.

The rumble of guns on the Polish plains raised new difficulties. War had come, and now the American problem was how to keep out of Europe's conflict. Neutrality was proclaimed. The armed forces moved into place, lest that neutrality be violated. Congress was called in special session, the lessons of the last war serving as partial guide on ways of keeping out of the new.

NEUTRALITY

In the complexity of reasons for American entrance into the World War, two had been impressed on the American mind in the post-war years. German torpedoings had aroused public emotions by taking toll of American lives and ships. Loans and arms sales on credit to the belligerents had created an economic interest. So far as law could guarantee, this was not to be again.

The rewritten Neutrality Law, enacted by Congress, expressed the public view in barring American shipping and American travelers from the war zones. Loans were banned. The embargo was stricken from the law and arms sales were placed on a cash-and-carry basis less likely to give the United States a stake in the purchasers' success.

To keep out of war had as a corollary the keeping of war's influence from all the Americas. Hemisphere defense, a cardinal policy of the Roosevelt administration, was brought into play, fitting nicely into the larger Good Neighbor policy that seeks to strengthen the economic and cultural bonds of the Americas. At Panama City delegates from the American republics met to study the war's effect and ways to cushion the shock from disordered Europe. The Declaration of Panama was one result. It established a 300-mile safety belt around the hemisphere's neutrals, wherein belligerent activities were to be barred. Though the belligerents failed to recognize the validity of the safety belt, the Americas maintained their position.

PEACE ROLE

Isolation from war but not isolation from peace characterized the Roosevelt administration's stand. The President made no moves toward mediation. He did, however, state at Christmas to the Pope, who was working for peace, his hope for a world in which peace would prevail and the rule of force end, and made clear that in the creating of such a world the United States would take a part.

The threat of war and the war itself affected the domestic life of the United States, where business was better and more men were finding work. European war orders were slow in arriving to stimulate any boom, and governmental controls were applied to check such a boom should it start. Public spending, despite defeat of a proposed spending-lending program, and domestic armament orders helped to make industry's wheels turn faster.

Public approval of the Roosevelt administration's handling of the foreign crisis promised to have political repercussions as the party leaders headed for 1940. In Congress the Administration had been roughly dealt with by a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats, a development from which the Republicans took heart. The war shifted public opinion, giving the Democrats hope.

Both parties worked in a fog of uncertainty laid by President Roosevelt's reticence about his plans for 1940. Among his advisers agitation for an unprecedented third term rose and fell. Their argument at first was that the New Deal's reforms could be safeguarded and extended only with Mr. Roosevelt again in the White House; after the war broke out they argued, instead, that an experienced hand was needed at the helm, and that in the present crisis only the Roosevelt hand would do.

The President kept his own counsel. But there were many prospective candidates who would have liked to know what he was thinking. Among the possible Democratic contenders were Vice President Garner and Social Security Administrator McNutt. The Republicans included Senators Taft and Vandenberg and New York's District Attorney Dewey.

The turbulent year had footnotes that fitted the more usual pattern of national life:

The Yankees took the World Series for the fourth year. Lou Gehrig, Yankee first baseman, ended a career after 2,130 consecutive games, a record. Joe Louis remained world's heavyweight champion.

Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings were freed.

Americans won $4,188,810 in the Grand National sweepstakes.

Collegians took up goldfish-swallowing.

President Roosevelt started controversy by setting Thanksgiving a week earlier than the traditional last Thursday in November. Twenty-three States accepted his dictum. Two celebrated both dates.

New York and San Francisco staged world's fairs that drew nearly 26,000,000 and 10,000,000 persons respectively. Europe's cloud fell across New York's "World of Tomorrow." The Czecho-Slovak pavilion represented a non-existent nation. Before the Fair closed Poland's pavilion was without a country.

The Roosevelts, entertaining the British monarchs, proved that hot dogs are fit for a king.
